Extract from the Author's Preface, in Illustration of the objects of his intended publication.—
"In all countries, Revenue and Riches depend upon the Exports. A Country largely importing of Foreign Goods, and not exporting in ratio articles of home production or manufacture must always be a poor country. Thus it has been from the earliest ages to the present time, and thus it must continue to the end of time.
Briefly to comment on such topics, as appear to the Author, to bear upon the causes of the present distressed state of the Colony, whether arising from local or external defects and diseases, or whatever their origin, will be the object of the following pages."

JUBILEE.—We did think that the Acting Governor would have brought into action his powerful energies to have thrown some life into the Jubilee held in commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the Colony, instead of which not even the military were either reviewed or inspected, nor were called upon to fire a feu de joie; at night Government House was as dark as it well could be; not a lamp twinkled, and if we except some fifty rounds of powder discharged from the guns of Dawes' Battery, exhibiting the usual festivities upon the occasion of a Jubilee was left entirely with the town's people, the Government showing a marvellous apathy. The inhabitants of Sydney, however, appeared determined that they would not bear the reproach of allowing such a festive occasion to pass unnoticed, and were therefore fully prepared to enjoy themselves. The sun rose with unusual brilliancy, and the day throughout was remarkably propitious. The Standard of England was hoisted at Dawes' Battery; the ships in harbour were covered with flags, and every boat that was to be hired floated on the waters. At the hour of eleven there was considerable bustle and preparation, as the Regatta got up for the occasion was to take place at that hour. The Australia, Experiment, Firefly, Rapid and Maitland steam boats, filled with company, left their respective wharves for the scene of amusement. The Neptune was the point of starting, about which was large assembly. The result of the first race was as follows: 1. North Star, Mr. Sawyer, red, white and blue 2. Pet, Mr. Lindo blue and the third a race among the whale boats, which caused much interest. 1. Red Nose—Mr. Hill 2. Ann.—Mr. Redgrave.

The race was well contested, and the Pet was at one time the favorite. The second race was thus decided: 1. Sea Gull 2. Queen Victoria.

In the evening the Town was illuminated in various parts, and five works were discharged in all directions, which added to the hilarity of the scene. Dinner was held at the Putney, and a Ball at the Old Fellows Arms, both of which were well attended. Thus ended the Australian Jubilee.

PORT PHILIP.—We have received the following intelligence by letter from Port Phillip, relative to the murder of Comerford: On the passage of the James Watt to that settlement, he attempted to effect his escape at Twofold Bay, from the constables in whose charge he was placed, which should have caused them to have kept a stricter guard upon his actions, than appears ultimately to have been the case. In charge of Sergeant Chin and a private, both of whom were discharged in the case, Comerford, who was placed to act as guide for the purpose of pointing out the spot where he said the remains of the five men would be found whom he and another man had murdered on their route to Port Phillip. They had been seven days travelling, and on the eighth morning they found that their principal support in the bush, tea, had been left at their last encampment, when it was agreed that constable Partington and the private should go back to procure it, while Chin, Tompkins, and Comerford, were to proceed on to the nearest water. Upon arriving there, they commenced kindling a fire, but small wood necessary for the purpose being scarce, sergeant Chin, put down his musket by the fire and went into the bush for that purpose; Tompkins also put down his piece, when Comerford who had been watching his opportunity, snatched up one of the muskets which had been so incautiously placed within his reach, and cocked it; Tompkins asked him what he was doing, and ordered him to put it down; Comerford told him that he would fire, and presented the piece to him to put him down, and presented the piece to him; Tompkins rushed in to wrest it from him, when Comerford fired and Tompkins fell wounded in the groin and arm; Sergeant Chin hearing the report, returned to enquire the cause, when Comerford, who changed the discharged for the loaded piece, presented, and then ordered him to keep his distance. Comerford then took the bush, and in about three days he had shot the four parties in whose charge he was placed; two of Mr. E's assigned servants took him into custody. He was forwarded to Port Phillip, and has been committed by the bench there to take his trial for the murder of Tompkins, who survived but three days.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—On Saturday an inquest was held at the King's Head, Harrington-street, upon the body of Mr. Francis Belby, who met his death the previous day by drowning. It appeared that Mr. B. was together with some of his men, were in a boat, having a seine; they had made several casts without success, and the pressure of the seine to half fill the boat with water, which, gathering at the head of the boat, it filled and went down, but rose to the surface bottom upwards. One of the men clung to it, the others made towards the shore, accompanied by Mr. B., who being a bad swimmer, sunk to his nose more. The men reached the shore safely, and immediately put off in a whale boat, seeing the body at the bottom they fished it up, but without effect. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidentally Drowned."

We are requested by Mr. Gregson to state that the whole of the manuscript of his pamphlet is in the Printer's hands, and that the number of copies subscribed for up to last night, under his former notices, will be deposited with Mr. Evans, and Mr. Tegg, as soon as possible.

THE THEATRE.

On Saturday night was performed, for the first time during the season, a stupid farce called My Husband's Ghost, which took about twenty minutes for representation. The performers certainly did their best, but that is all which can be said on the subject.

Mr. Lee, if he again sustains the part of Corporal Hasket, not to charter a coat that would become the back of a Lieutenant General. Mr. Fitzgerald then went through a hornpipe. To which succeeded, Norah, the pride of Killdare, by Mrs. Clarke, in that lady's well known superior style of execution, and although the house was miserably attired, the ballad was encored. Victoria, or Full sleep out, followed, and was played well. We feel a pleasure in stating, that the little misunderstanding between Mr. Lazar and Mr. Munyard, has been adjusted, and that the two gentlemen, contained in our last number, of retaining Mr. M. upon the strength of the company, have been attended to. The company, now Mr. Spencer has rejoined, is composed of sufficient talent to get up a piece of the highest cast. We understand that Richard the Third will be performed on the night of Thursday week, when Mr. Spencer will enact the "crooked back tyrant." The Gazette, in speaking of Mr. Munyard, says, that he made his first appearance in the character of Leopold, in The Jew, for the benefit of Mr. Levy, the promoter. This is an error; his debut was in the character of John Forrester, while Mr. Spencer played Leopold; he subsequently performed Leopold on the retirement of Mr. Spencer.

Captain Norris, of the Psyche whaler, has so far recovered his late indisposition, that he will proceed to the ground in command of his vessel.

BURGALARY.—On Saturday night a burglarious party was effected into the public house on Kent-street, called the Plough, kept by Mr. Birch. It appears that the robbers obtained admittance by the use of a chisel and a jimmy, upon the bar door, by which the bolt of the lock was forced back and ingress obtained. They then commenced packing up property to a very considerable amount. Mr. Birch being awakened by the noise, proceeded to that part of the house where the plunderers were engaged, one of them made off with a bundle, while the other encountered Mr. B., and a "desperate combat," to speak more dramatically, ensued, when the fellow finding himself going to leeward, dropped his tools and bolted. Constable Reardon hearing the cry of "stop thief," and observing a man coming towards him with a bundle, attempted to stop him, when he let it fall and made off. Upon the bundle being opened, it was found to contain property belonging to Mr. Birch, valued at £20.

At the Police Office, on Monday, Mr. Ayton, the landlord of the Crispin Arms, Clarence-street, was charged with the following street robbery.—A robbery named William Crozier stated, that on Saturday night he went with a friend of his, named Taylor, who lived at Ayton's, to have supper with him; they were both sober; after supper, upon going out, a stranger to him commenced abusing Taylor, and finally knocked him down. Crozier complained to Ayton that he kept an improper house, and that he would report him, upon which Ayton knocked him down. On getting up he ran down the street, followed by Ayton, who got him against the wall, and took from his person a pocket book containing two one pound notes, and fourteen shillings in silver. Ayton has been committed but allowed bail, himself in £80, and two sureties in £40 each.

On Sunday night a man having more time than honesty, entered the house of a maker of ginger beer bottles, outside the Old Toll-bar, named McAnn, and commenced rummaging his pockets, but without finding any of the pecuniary. He then collected together a variety of trifling articles, and was walking off, when Mr. Nichols, raised the alarm, and the fellow after a hard chase was captured.

It is not true that the Colonel intends having a cast taken of his cranium, as a present to the ethnological society. Strange that people will raise such reports.

Sydney was visited on Sunday afternoon by a very heavy thunder storm, accompanied by a refreshing rain, which has made the gardens in the suburbs smile, the parched and drooping vegetation assuming a healthy green, in the place of the sickly yellow which had usurped its place.
