Knowledge is power." Lord Bacon.

WHALE FISHERY .- The latest accounts from London, represent the prospects of the Davis' Straits fishery to be of a gloomy nature; the whole quantity for the season not being likely to exceed one thousand tuns; a rise has been the result, in which the holders of oil in this Colony will participate, verifying the old proverb, " It's an ill wind that blows no one good." There has been also an advance upon sperm oil, for which

THE THEATRE.

On Saturday night was produced, for the firs time this season, the lively Burletta entitled the Married Rake. Mr. Lazar was successful as Mr Frederick Flighty—he was rakish to the life Mrs. Taylor as Mrs. Trictrac and Cornel Fitz. herbert Fitzhenry was lively and entertaining.
Mrs. Flighty was ably sustained by Mrs. Clarke.
Mrs. Downes was just passable as Susan Twist; she should never be put out of this line, and then there might be some hopes of an improvement in her acting. The Married Bachelor and Gustavus the Third concluded the evening's entertainments. The house filled well at half-price.

Her Majesty has been graciously pleased t appoint Captain Thomas Fernyhough, one of the Military Knights of Windsor. The instal lation took place in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, when the Hon. and Very Rev. Dr Hobart, Dean of Windsor, and Registrar of the Noble Order of the Garter, administered the oaths to the new Military Knight. He was af-terwards installed during Divine Service 13th September.—Staffordshire Advertiser.—Captain, Fernyhough is the father of Mr. Fernyhough the Artist of George-street.

On Monday a native of the Colony, name Richard Martin, was committed to take his trial for embezzlement under the following circum-stances: He was employed by Mr. John Baptist Verdau, a baker residing upon the Brickfield Hill, as his hired servant, his duty being to carry out bread in the morning, and upon his return to give an account of the disposal of it either by producing money or having it carried to the debit of a customer. Among other names he had given in to his master as a debtor for bread was Mr. Vickery, the boot and shoemaker of George street, and upon his leaving the employ of Mr. Vardau, on the 16th January, Mr. Vickery by the book appeared indebted to the amount of 19s. 54d. As Verdau did not know the customers whom Martin supplied, Martin offered to collect the debts for him, which was consented to, and a list of debts amounting to upwards of £12 was made out to him; he wished to give Mr. Vardau his note of hand, endorsed for the amount, and take the debts upon him self, but this was refused. Martin paid two pounds upon one occasion, and a second two pounds about a fortnight afterwards, as a part of the debts collected. Mr. Vardau notfinding the accounts coming in through Martin as fast as he could wish, made out the accounts as they stood upon the book, and among the rest that of Mr. Vickery for 19s. 54d, who upon having it prething. Mr. Vickery stated that he owed anything. Mr. Vickery stated that he paid every day, or at furthest every two days for the bread, and prisoner had received the money. Martin was committed. There were several other charges pening him but they were charges against him, but they were not gone into. Mr. Poole conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Rowe appeared for the prisoner.

On Sunday afternoon a man named Alexander Hamilton, a remarkably stupid fellow by the by, met at the corner of George and Bridge streets a woman named Bridget Butler, whom he accosted and invited to take a stroll with him; she attempted to do modest in the first instance, but the prospect of a gill of rum in the distance soon moved her soul to pity, and she distance soon moved her soul to pity, and sho accompanied him; after dropping in at a couple of public houses, and solacing themselves with some rum and ginger beer, and quantum suff, of hafe and hafe, as Alexander called it, he found that a pouch in which he kept his cash had evaporated with sixteen half-crowns; he taxed his companion with the theft, who after a decent share of struggling, just by way of saving appearances, permitted him to put his hand into her bosom, from whence he drew forth the lost his charmer with the Colonel; this threat pro-duced a couple of the lost pieces, which she ab stracted from her stocking. Alick was still in exorable, and handed her to the Policeman When before the Bench, Alick admitted that he was excessively stupid owing to a blow which he had received upon the head, and he would not undertake to say that he did not give the woman the money; she was consequently dis-

On Saturday night Serjeant Ryan took a man named James Marsh into custody in a disorderly house, suspecting him to be a prisoner of the Crown. Upon scarching Marsh he found a ske-leton key and a padlock key. It appeared that Marsh was a free man, employed by Mr. Johnson, the landlord of the "Crown" on the Brick-The skeleton key Marsh said he used to unlock his box, having lost the proper one, but a key of another description was found which evidently belonged to the box lock. The padlock key belonged to a padlock in the cellur, from which Mr. Johnson missed, upon taking stock, a number of bolts, thumb latches, and stock and bits. Prisoner Marsh had access to the cellar to procure corn to feed the poultry. He is committed.

On Saturday afternoon the Chief Officer of the brig Calatea, upon entering the cabin when he was unexpected, found that the Steward, James Burn, had opened one of the lockers, from which he was taking rum, and some of the spirits was running across the deck. Rum had been missed at various times, and it being suspected from this circumstance that Burn was the thief; the Chief Mate searched his cabin and found a dirty mustard bottle containing about a pint and a half of rum; the Steward, seeing the bottle in his hand, struck at him, and the bottle fell and was broken. Burn was given into the custody of the Police.

The followers of the stage in this Colony ap pear to get any thing but jut by the profession. Upon one of the male actors going to the Treasury on Saturday last, he was informed that he was to be mulcted five shillings, the stuffing used by him as a masker in the Drama of Gustanak bearing fallen and to the same having fallen and the the same having fallen and t eus having fallen out to the amusement of the audience. "Give me some breakfast then," was the reply, "for I have had none these two days, and then instead of being hollow as a drum, I shall be able to support a fulse protuberance."
This argument was of no avail—the fine was in-

On Saturday, walking up Park street, we were somewhat surprised at perceiving a cloud of dast purpose of inspection, but a few minutes cleared it: she first said that she bought it in a shop in proved to be twenty seven constables laden with furniture of all descriptions, which upon enquiry proved to belong to the Colonel, and that they were conveying them to his new residence at Darlinghurst. Is it correct that the public should be left unprotected, while the constables are transformed into heasts of burthen?

are transformed into heasts of burtnen:

On Friday night a man named Waters, living on the Surry Hills, deliberately placed the muzzale of a loaded pistol under his right ear and pulled the trigger; the contents lodzéd in the head. Medical attendance was procured, but the nature of the wound precludes all hope of recovery. The bad conduct of his wife is said to have caused the unhappy man to commit this held at the office of Mr. Pitt Bourne, Terry's Bildings, Pitt-street, the intention of which is of the necessity of parties leaving the Colony advertising at least a month proficusly to taking their departure, and the imperative duty of the Colonial Legislature to pass an enactment to this effect. A party residing in George-street and carrying on the business of a chemist and druggist, was found one morning to have bid farewell to Sydney and all its pleasures, having contracted a trifle of debt with some credulous individuals, amounting to upwards of TWELVE HUNDRED POUNDS, which in the hurry of his departure he forgot to liquidate. And to complete the whole affair secundum artem, a member of his family left behind sold off the whole of the remaining shop goods, so that the deluded creditors, to speak Colonistically, are "regularly done." If any thing requires reforming in this Colony, it is to rescind this tacit permission to persons to contract debts and bolt with the pro-

We hail the return to Sydney of our old friend Captain Rossi, bringing with him a pleasing rotundity of person, caused doubtless by the good things of Argyleshire. Impertinent people lo say that the gallant Captain intends shortly to be bound with the silken bands of Hymen. Well, suppose it is his pleusure, who has any right to interfere with the matter we should like to know? But our private opinion given sub rosa is, that such is not the fact, and that the report has been circulated for the sake of raising laugh at the expense of the poor little man,

The ship Brilliant is for charter; Mr. John Gilchrist is agent.

Mrs. Leach having been appointed Matron of the Female Factory at Parramatta, we should hope that a change would come o'er the spirit of the dreams of the ladies there confined, so as to render confinement there anything but pleasant, and instead of amusing themselves with making the execution of lancy work, which is reported to be the ease, they will find substituted hard labour in its more extended sense.

The Commissioner of the Court of Requests has decided against the parties who were tre-panned into signing the miscalled Patriotic bond, and when they discovered the trick de-clined being gulled any longer.

On Thursday night, between the hours of 12 and I o'clock, Mr. Farthing, the landlord of the "Cross Keys," corner of King and Kent streets, was awoke by his servant calling out "Master, master, the house is being robbed." Mr. F. immediately got up, and upon searching the premises found that an entry had been effected through a back window on the second floor; apon further search being made, a well known housebreaker, named Timothy Quinlan, was dis-covered behind a door and immediately secured. A quantity of bed linen had been thrown out of window by which the robber entered, and was made up in a bundle ready to be carried off, so that it is tolerably clear that he had accomplices. Upon finding these clothes Mr. Furthing emembered that he had money in his trousers pocket alongside his bed; he searched and found that two one-pound notes and about thirty shilpouch, with eight of the sixteen half crowns. All lings in silver had been taken therefrom, and Mick's love now turned to rage, and instead of putting up with the trifling loss he threatened son of Quinlan, and an eye-glass which had been son of Quinlan, and an eye glass which had been taken from Farthing's jacket pocket.

On Thursday night a constable entered the nouse of a man named Michael Sheridan, on the Rocks, being of opinion that some one whom he wanted was concealed there; the first thing which met his view was a man named Smith offering to a New Zealander a blanket; upon perceiving the constable he threw it on a sofa: the constable, considering something was wrong took it up and examined it, and found that it was branded B. O. 1835. Smith stated that the blanket had been his covering at night for the last six weeks, during which he had lodged there, and Sheridan stated that he purchased the blanket of a man named Moran for three shillings, who however denied such to be the case.

In and William Cox, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in swearing that he went to the house of a man named Jannes Walsh, in the Curryjong, and asked him if he had a dram, to which he replied yes, and Walsh brought him rather more than a glass, which he drank and paid sixpence for it, when in truth and in fact.

Knickbocher's History of New York Wesley's Natural Philosophy, 6 vols. Segar's Expedition to Russia, 2 vols. Life of Ali Pasha Lives of Banditti and Robbers Sketches of Imposter and Credulity was branded B. O. 1835. Smith stated that the Upon enquiry being instituted it appeared that the blanket belonged to the Military Barrack department, and had been served out to some one of the 17th Regiment now iu India, and must have been stolen from or surreptitiously taken out of Barracks, it being in too good a condition ever to have been condemned and sold. Sheridan is in custody; Smith has been admitted an evidence against him.

To-morrow evening a meeting will be held a Walker's long room, Parramatta, with a view of forming a Benevolent Society; H. H. M'Arthur Esq. in the chair.

On Saturday night, Mr. Inspector Hoyle apprehended another absence from the Ironed Gang Stockade at Carters' Barracks, and found upon his person a piece of fine cambric and some ribbon, which doubtless the fellow had stolen. Really the machinery of this place must be out of order, to admit of these continual escapes or are the inmates of the Stockade permitted to roam through Sydney at their leisure and plunder the inhabitants. On Sunday morning, between the hours of one and three o'clock, the house of a person named Williams, in Kent-street. was burglariously entered, and a quantity of wearing apparel ously entered, and a quantity of wearing apparer, cheese, sugar, ham, candles, &c. were stolen. Mr. Inspector Fitzpatrick hearing of the circumstance, went to the house, when Mrs. Williams informed him, that she had seen a little girl come out from a disorderly house with some cheese similar to that stolen, and she further suspected that the rest of the property was there, as her husband had been drinking there the overnight. Having thus obtained a clue, Mr. Fitzpatrick followed it up by proceeding to the house, where he found the greater part of the stolen property. The inmates were William Hartland and Ann Cavenagh, who appeared to get us the ind Ann Cavenagh, who appeared to act as the blush of the affair of opinion that the military of sugar similar to that stolen, Mr. Fitzpatrick were advancing towards the race-course for the up the mystery; the promoters of the dust George-street, and then, that she had it from her sister. We have now lying before us an Act for regulating Buildings and Party-walls, and for preventing mischief by Firein the Town of Sydney; printed verbatim from the Government Gazetto Passed the Legislative Council 8th September 1837, and came into operation on the 1st Janu ary, 1838. This Act is printed and published by Mr. J. Tegg of George street, and is very cre ditably executed. We would recommend parties intending to build to procure the same, as we are of opinion the building clauses are to the are or opinion the building clauses are to the greater part unknown. Police Incidents.

"OYSTER,S O."-Richard Hancock, a kind of walking oyster bed, who perambulates the street by the aid of one of Nature's legs, and an as-sistant from the hands of a turner, tryin to coax the lovers of his wares, which he vends in coax the lovers of his wares, which he vends in a tin can, to swallow a gill or half a pint, as the case may happen, to the tune of "Oysters," all alive, O—here's your fat and good oysters," a stentorian voice adds much to the effect, and the deluded multitude are to be seen gathering round, and swallowing the strengthening food from measures of all sizes, laughing and joking at the treat. On Tuesday morning, between one and two o'clock, the shout of "Oysters, O, was to be heard rolling down George street, and a charley who was awoke at the row, ordered him off; this was objected to on the ground of prioff: this was objected to on the ground of privilege—such a request never having been before made; the Charley was determined, and finding that "Oysters, O," was still his cry, he locked him up together with his can and its contents, which resembled pieces of dough floating in greasy water. Richard now had nothing to say, ind he was discharged with a caution.
