Walking in a devil may care kind of manner through the streets of Sydney, on Tuesday, our officious were titillated with most savory perfume; it was grateful to the nostrils; we thought at first the hose were passing, had given an invite to a numerous party, and that the curling steam from the kitchen was but the fore-runner of the feast.

At a public dinner held at Walker's Hotel, Parliament-street, on the 22d ult. got up as a mark of respect to Mr. Thora, the late Chief Constable, who discharged the duties of that most important office for the last sixteen years.

One of the "Randal" mob, as they have classically christened themselves, was brought before the police on Thursday, charged with indecency in the streets the previous night, at half past eleven o'clock; but as the charity was unopposed, and the case perhaps not being altogether clear, he was lucky enough to escape.

The Police Office will soon become a scene of confusion, in consequence of the numerous warrants which are apparently issued in the most reckless manner.

On Tuesday night a woman residing in Cavendish-street, named Rose Bryan, was discovered dead in her bed.

On Tuesday night a woman residing in Cavendish-street, named Rose Bryan, was discovered dead in her bed.

On Tuesday a young child, named Kimarily, playing in front of his parents' house on the rocky hills, accidentally fell into a pit from which brick earth had been dug, but was then full of water, and before assistance could be rendered the vital spark had fled.

MILITARY AND CIVILIAN.—That the military are a very necessary adjunct to this Colony is unquestionable, but the squabbles that continually arise between them and the townspeople is disquieting to both parties.

On the night of Tuesday a man named Kirwin was discovered in Pitt-street in a state of glorious oblivion, and a wheelbarrow having been put in pay he was conveyed to the watch-house, and in the morning was found dead.

On Tuesday Judge Burton sent a bill to gaol for a month, for appearing before the Court in a state of intoxication.

Thursday being St. David's day, a small knot of Welshmen were to be seen walking the streets of Sydney having the national lark in their hats.

That improper system of mustering Tickets of Leave at the Police Office, again came off yesterday. The public time is wasted and thrown away, waiting for a Magistrate; the Colonel attending to inspect the documents.

Walking in a devil may care kind of manner through the streets of Sydney, on Tuesday, our officious were titillated with most savory perfume; it was grateful to the nostrils; we thought at first the hose were passing, had given an invite to a numerous party, and that the curling steam from the kitchen was but the fore-runner of the feast.

At a public dinner held at Walker's Hotel, Parliament-street, on the 22d ult. got up as a mark of respect to Mr. Thora, the late Chief Constable, who discharged the duties of that most important office for the last sixteen years.

A man being placed at the bar on Thursday stated that he was a shoemaker at home. Every other sentence was taken against him, he kept exclaiming, "Take that down, there now mark that." The Bench remarked that they thought he had more of the lawyer than the shoemaker in his composition.

Our readers may remember that some months since there was a fire up, in consequence of a man named William Kelly having imposed upon the Rev. Mr. Cartwright, one of the Surrogates for granting marriage licenses, through which he was enabled to marry a young girl named Mary Kellaheer, his first wife it was alleged being then alive in Ireland.

On Wednesday His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Colonel Wilson, took a survey of Sydney upon horseback.

On Thursday a full Bench of Magistrates consented to the business of the Bushy Park Barrack, formerly kept by Robert Maddox, being carried on by John Lander, said Maddox having given his consent in writing to a transfer of the license next transfer day.

One of the "Randal" mob, as they have classically christened themselves, was brought before the police on Thursday, charged with indecency in the streets the previous night, at half past eleven o'clock; but as the charity was unopposed, and the case perhaps not being altogether clear, he was lucky enough to escape.

ORIGINAL.

THE COLONEL.

Who upon the Bench does sit, And wishes to be thought a wit, And quotes old Joe, to make a hit?

Who thinks that woman is no blessing, Unless she's very prepossessing— And who for meddling got a dressing?

Who swore whate'er the Court might say, The "Costs" he would not, could not pay, Yet cashed up to the very day.

Who on America's southern shore, With regiment numbering just two score, Murillo licked, that thund'ring bore?

Who cracked a joke with X. M. P., In dress box 'scenced, nor thought that he Should hear of such a pleasantry?

Who thinks himself the thing indeed, At reel, cotillon, gallopade, And in the waltzes mazes wades?

Who has obtained the envied name, Of "lady's man," besides the fame, Of being chaperon de dames?

Who musters charleys once a week— On Sundays, thinking it a treat, To dull them when they're off their beat.

Who dashes through the mob's array, And boldly mills a head his way, Captures a brace to show his way?

Forewell! we cannot scribble on, Our light's defunct, the mow is gone, We'll meet you on to-morrow morn— Sweet Colonel.

Supreme Court-Criminal Side.

MONDAY.—Before Judge Burton and a Military Jury. Davy—Magee was indicted for assaulting John Batman, and presenting at Melbourne, Port Phillip, on the 12th August. The second count charged him with a common assault.

It appeared from the evidence, that on the evening laid in the information, prisoner was in the public-house of a man named Moss; and the hour of nine having arrived, he wished all his customers to retire that he might close the premises; Magee would not leave; upon Batman who is Chief Constable at the new settlement at Port Phillip, coming in, was informed of Magee's refusal to leave; Mr. B. insisted upon his going, and as he drew back out of the door he presented a loaded gun at him, saying that he would be d—d if he would leave before he had put a couple of bullets through him; a soldier who was present, fearing that bloodshed might ensue, went round the house and seized the gun from Magee, who upon retiring towards his home said, that he would serve them out with a gun that he had at home. He was subsequently captured at his house in a state of intoxication. His Honor held that the mere presentation of the piece without pulling the trigger, or other visible sign of his intention to shoot, the first count could not be sustained. They would apply their attention to the second count. Guilty on the second count, and sentenced to be imprisoned for twelve months, at the expiration of which, he was to find securities to keep the peace for two years. His Honor said, that he should recommend the government to reward the soldier with the sum of £5 for his praiseworthy conduct in this case.

Supreme Court-Civil Side.

Before Judge Burton, and Lockyer and Lethbridge Esqs. J.P.s., assessors. Moorehouse vs. Humphries.—This was an action to recover a sum of money for teaching defendant's children reading, writing, arithmetic, and other polite accomplishments. Plaintiff not being able to substantiate his case was nonsuited.

Condon vs. Rich.—This was an action against the endorser of a promissory note to recover the sum of £50, but there being no proof that the note had been presented to the acceptor, plaintiff was nonsuited.

Betts vs. Hughes.—This was an action to recover damages for an assault on an aggravated nature. A verdict was returned for plaintiff. Damages £50.

WEDNESDAY.—Before Judge Burton and assessors. Anderson vs. J. T. Hughes.—This was an action brought to recover the sum of £121, for cedar sold defendant. The fact of the sale was not disputed, but the plea was that defendant had sold plaintiff a farm for £410, and that the cedar was part payment. An agreement was produced which stipulated that the farm should be paid for in money. His Honor held, that if defendant had received cedar to the amount of the farm plaintiff could not have claimed possession, as the statute of fraud did not require any verbal transfers of land. Verdict for plaintiff for the amount sought.

Thursday.—Before Judge Burton and Howe and Clarke Esqs., assessors. Lee vs. Green.—This was an action brought to recover the sum of £46, for goods sold and delivered. It appeared that some time ago the early part of last year that defendant purchased of plaintiff, a cask of London cordial gin, which upon all hands was pronounced to be superannuated. In September last, plaintiff called on defendant saying, that he had another cask of gin equal, if not superior to the last, which he might have at one shilling less per gallon. "Mind how of the 'Cricketers Arms,'" closed with the bargain. The cask was sent in and deposited in the cellar, but upon being tapped on the third day it was found to be a very good idea of an animated totterer, he called aloud for her to stop, which after a few more twirls she found it necessary to do, more from want of wind than from any inclination to stay the amusement upon her part.

Bench—Where you drink? Eliza—Don't see now ask such a question, consider my delicacy.

Bench—You're an old hand here, we know you. Eliza—Spare me this once, do now.

Bench—No. How many hours did you have last time? Eliza (with a heavy sigh)—Three.

Bench—According to the graduated scale you will now receive four unless you can pay five shillings.

Eliza—Dear me; constable, where's my reticent?

Constable—Here's a dirty bag; I know nothing about your ridiculousness.

Eliza—Nasty fellow. After rummaging the bag, which it unquestionably was, a dirty one too, and pulling out sundry bits of linen rags, a thimble, piece of wax, paper of pins, and a few indescribable articles, she was forced to acknowledge she was cleaned out, and therefore would put up with the stocks.

BRITISH EXTRACTS.

DREADFUL MUTINY AT SEA.—A dreadful mutiny and massacre have taken place on board the British ship Fanny, Captain Mackay, master, formerly sailing from London. This fine ship, the property of Messrs. Jardine, Mathison and Co. the merchants of Canton, left Lunenburg Bay for Linton on the 17th of August, 1836, with a mixed crew of Europeans, Manila, and Lascars. On the same night, the Manila men, who had entered into a conspiracy to take the vessel and murder the captain, officers, and Europeans, rose upon them, and first despatched the unfortunate commander with their knives, and threw his body overboard. The savage and treacherous villains then murdered the Europeans who were surprised and overpowered. The mutineers obtained possession of the Fanny, and took her to the north coast of Luzon, and then, after plundering the vessel, sunk her. It appears that previous to the mutineers leaving the coast of China, they loaded a portion of the La-
