English Grammar School.

THE Undersigned begs again respectfully to recommend this Establishment to the attention of Parents and Guardians, and feels assured that those who favor him with their confidence will not find it inferior to any other School for the moral and intellectual improvement of Pupils.

Its design is not indeed to give that Classical and Scientific education more peculiarly adapted for the learned profession, but it is presumed that a good, plain, grammatical, and commercial education, is sufficient for the majority of country gentlemen and men of business; and as respects those for whom it may be necessary to add other attainments, the "English Grammar School" offers a good solid foundation of learning useful to all whereupon any superstructure can afterwards be erected that may be deemed expedient.

It is also thought to be not altogether unimportant that the individual conducting it has passed through a variety of different scenes in a somewhat chequered and eventful life—has seen men and manners in different countries of the world, and has thus had opportunity of maturing his judgment in an extensive sphere of observation, so that in carefully attending to the disposition and capacity of those entrusted to his care, he hopes to succeed better in developing any promising indications of character—be enabled occasionally to elicit the spark of genius from individuals in whom it would otherwise lie concealed—present to others of a dull and sluggish temper, motives to animate them on to energy and exertion, and in short promote the moral and intellectual improvement of all entrusted to him for their education.

Murder of the Captain of the "Ere David Ogilby."

The following particulars relative to the murder of the above unfortunate individual, have been forwarded for publication by Captain McNeice:—

Brig Mermaid, Peru Harbour, May 13, 1838.

Sir, I am sorry that I have to inform you of the sad disaster that happened to the Ere David Ogilby, shortly after her arrival at these Islands. She arrived here on the 28th April, having (as Captain Hatkins informed me) experienced much bad weather on her passage from Sydney. Capt. H. informed me of the route he had thought of taking to obtain shell; but being disappointed in his plans, in consequence of my having obtained all that was worth spending time for, he determined to spend one or two months in fishing before proceeding to Manila. For this purpose, he purchased of me three knives for 2s each, and also shipped five men, two from me and three from the shore, and sailed for Beratta on the 30th same month. For your satisfaction I will state the amount of trade expended at this place as given to me by Captain H. One whale's tooth to each of the principal chiefs, six four-tooth for shell turtle; six galleons hamer, one hog powder and one musket; or five head shell and several hogs; this shell belonged to a white man who was fording putting his foot on board my vessel; I believe this account to be correct; Captain H. anchored at Beratta the following day. The particulars from that time till her arrival at this place, you will get from the certificates, signed by those who were on board of her at the time of the disaster, and by the Lobokor people who assisted in bringing her to this place; she arrived off this harbour, on the morning of the 3rd instant, with colours half mast, fired a gun, and shortened sail; a boat was despatched from my vessel with Mr. Linden (the present master) and four hands to render any necessary assistance; I was ashore at the time, but returning at noon, I took a small canoe and hoisted the burgee; I heard that Captain H. was dead—killed at Beratta and buried in Lobokor; one hand also killed; I found the water (Mr. White) lying below in a dying condition, with five severe cuts on the head, his neck and shoulders much bruised, apparently with clubs. All (with one exception) who were on board at the time, were more or less wounded. Several hands (as he called him, self mate) was severely wounded in the head, cut, but doing duty when I went on board; Edward Stevens bruised in the thigh with a spear; Thomas McCallen wounded in the head and shoulder by a club; John Hunter on the head and hand by a club; John Jones, a severe cut on the foot. I brought the vessel to anchor and sent those whose wounds needed dressing aboard my vessel to have them dressed; Mr. White's wounds were dressed as well as circumstances would admit, it being impossible to move him, his head and neck were greatly swollen, he was completely disfigured. I found the vessel in great disorder; there were chests in the cabin, unlocked, and no keys to be found; trade lying about in all directions, and a cask of liquor on board to which every one had access; there were clothes stained with blood, and patches of blood in various places about the cabin; one musket ball hole through the Captain's state room door, and one in the harbour berth, both apparently fired down the skylight; on deck there were many traces of blood, on the harbour quarter and on the running rigging, and about the quarter-deck. I found her order in great disorder. The fish, some of it in bad order and all much exposed; before leaving the vessel I sent for my first officer to come on board and remain during the night to see that nothing should be taken from her. The next morning (Sunday), I sent for Mr. Cross, the Missionary who resides here who came down and went on board the Ogilby in company. Found Mr. White no better and insensible, concluded it best for him that he should be sent ashore. Accordingly, I hired a canoe and put him in and sent his effects up with him. I noticed some of the hands a little worse for liquor, and before I left the vessel I informed Hicks (who had charge of it) that if a better use was not made of it, I should start it all over-board, let the consequences be what they would. The next morning (Monday) Mr. Cross came again and went on board the Ogilby. At this time, I took full charge of the vessel, seeing no one on board whom I thought capable of the duty. I overhauled and found the ship's papers and found by the articles that no officer remained on board, although Hicks maintained that Captain H. had made him such; his promotion, however, I took charge of the vessel in my own name; I took an inventory of Captain H's property and of the trade &c., I found on board. Finding that they still continued to use the liquor freely, I ordered the cask to be got on deck, and in the presence of all hands had it stove, and started overboard; it was not quite half full, but in destroying it, I believe, I acted for the benefit of all concerned. Hicks being unwell, I had an officer on board with orders to have the hold cleared up; the fish covered from the weather, and her rigging put in condition for sea. I hired canoes to fill up her water, they watering with my casks and paid them from the trade of the vessel, I have accounted for, and in every respect I have acted with her as my own property. I found no invoice of the property on board, but kept a sufficient look out, but if Capt. H. had a number of doubloons on board (his own property) asking me at the same time their value in Manila; these I have not been able to find, but think that (if he had such in his possession) they are together with a watch secreted somewhere on board the vessel; I expect to get her, in not more than a week, and shall put Mr. Linden in charge of her. This man has been in my employ upwards of 4 years, and (leaving liquor on one side) I cannot speak of him in too high terms; as he intends to return to these Islands to reside, and put up a small vessel. I would recommend him as a first rate pilot for these Islands, either for a man of war or merchant man.

I sincerely hope that this disaster of the Ogilby will be noticed by your government, and that shortly an armed vessel will be here to take satisfaction. It is time something was done, otherwise trade here will not be safe. It may be said that the whites are the aggressors; but it is reasonable to suppose that a master looking for his voyage will voluntarily affront the natives; whoever may have been the aggressors in similar instances at other islands, you may believe me, that the whites have not, in instances of this kind here. The only blame that can be attached to masters of vessels visiting here is, in not keeping a sufficient look out; but if Capt. H. of the Ogilby, was to blame in this respect, he is exalted above the punishment. Threats and promises are of no avail; they place so little value on human life, and so many whites have been killed whose deaths remain unavenged, that it is not probable that they deter the natives. The English armed vessel that visited these islands had Mr. Linden on board for a pilot. The commander of her did all he could, or as much, perhaps, as he felt authorised to do, concerning the French brig that was taken by the Bever people in 1831. But I have since heard these same natives ridicule that vessel, and speak of her commander as a coward. It is not long since there was an English ship ashore at Cantab. The first officer was ashore trading, and the natives detained him ashore and kept him till ransomed by the Captain. They are eager to possess the trade we bring among them, and until an example has been set them of the power of armed vessels, they will never cease their treacherous attempts upon vessels whenever they have an opportunity. The French should not forget they owe them a small debt; the sooner it were paid the better. The Americans trade we have held here the last eleven years, the heads of our government are much to blame, for not noticing the deprivations of what are termed at home these unoffending natives. The trade is certainly but small, but worth protecting, and if not furnished, will be carried on with great risk and the loss of many lives. The navigation here is very bad, but notwithstanding, I believe there are many officers in our navy, who would run any risk to avenge these unprovoked treacheries.

With respect to Mr. Linden, I have agreed with him, that for his services he is to receive £100 on his arrival in Sydney, which amount, I think, is not out of the way. The failure of this part of the voyage cannot but be attended with considerable expense on your part; but, perhaps, not so much as if the vessel had been taken, or the accident had happened subsequent to my departure, and no other vessel here. At all events, Sir, those who were on board of her at the time of the affray, are deserving of credit, and entitled to your generous consideration for retaking and bringing her here. To-morrow was the day I had intended to sail, but the arrival of the Ogilby under such circumstances will detain me four or five days longer; but the detention of my vessel and my trouble in looking after her you will be able to consider mostly as the discharge of my duty to a vessel in distress. I shall be pleased to hear that she has arrived safe in Sydney, also that measures have been taken to punish the offenders. Should you feel disposed to furnish me such information, please address to me, Salem, Mass. U. S. A.

I remain, yours truly, J. H. EGGLESTON.

To Mr. William McNeice. P. S.—Mr. White remains much the same—I think his recovery doubtful.

The following position of a shoal, in the Palawan passage, is extracted from the log book of the Argyle, Captain Saunders:—

"On the 21st November, at half past 8 A. M., saw coral rocks close under the ship's bottom, with not more than 4 or 4 1/2 fathoms water upon them. Hove in stays, and while going about, the ship's heel appeared to be close down upon the rocks. Having on lead line in the chains, did not think of sounding at the time, but after running east 3 miles, the water still continuing discoloured, heeled the ship up in the wind, and got a cast of the deep-sea lead, and had 27 fathoms coral. Latitude brought back from noon, by observation 11° 50' north, longitude by chronometer by two sets of good sights 117° 52' east; having steered the east from the time of being upon the shoal."—Canton Press, Dec. 23

SYDNEY MARKETS.

There was a plentiful supply this morning. No alteration has taken place in wheat, flour or bread; Mr. Barker has purchased the wheat per Lady Wellington. RENEWAL OF NEW SOUTH WALES ACT, 9 Geo. IV. Cap. 83, passed 25 July, 1828.

Dispatch from the Right Honourable Lord Glenelg, Secretary of State for the Colonies, to His Excellency Sir Richard Bourke, K. C. B., His Excellency's Secretary.

The highly important Enquiries which engaged the Select Committee of the House of Commons, during the last Session, with reference to the moral effect of the System of Transportation, as well as on the criminal himself, as on the Colonial Society into which he is thrown, seemed to render it desirable that the adoption of any new Act of Legislation for the Australian Colonies should not be pressed on the consideration of Parliament sooner than was indispensable necessary, pending those enquiries; and the Session being suddenly terminated by the demise of the Crown, the only course remaining for Her Majesty's Government was, to propose the continuance of the existing Act, which has accordingly been carried into effect.

I have the honour, &c. &c. G. LINDSAY.

THE AUSTRALIAN CLUB.—A NEW SOCIETY was formed under the style and title of the Australian Club, on the 1st instant, when the following Committee was chosen:—

E. Aspinall, Esq.; Major Barney; Dr. Bowden; David Chambers, Esq.; S. A. Donaldson, Esq.; F. Fisher, Esq.; Colonel Gibb; T. C. Harrington, Esq.; Colonel Leahy; George McLeay, Esq.; Captain McLean; E. Manning, Esq.; R. R. McKenzie, Esq.; J. H. Plunkett, Esq.; C. F. Warner, Esq.

The objects of the club are the following:—The Australian Club is instituted for facilitating the social and literary intercourse of individuals resident in the colony, and for the general interests of country gentlemen. The club to consist of Trustees, Committees of Management, Treasurer, and others elected from the original members who have signed the rules and regulations. The whole number of members to be limited to two hundred. All Magistrates and civil officers in the colony, all officers of the army, navy, or military, and all resident in the colony, all appointments in the military department of the colony, &c. &c. shall be eligible, and all civil, naval and military officers of the honorable East India Company service shall be eligible to become members of the club. His Excellency and the Commander of the Forces in the colony for the time being, foreigners of rank and quality; or visiting gentlemen, civil, naval, or military, to the colony, may be invited at the discretion of the Committee of Management to become honorary members of the club without being called upon for entrance money or subscription. After first formation of the club, members to be admitted by ballot alone. Entrance fee 20 guineas, and annual subscription 25 in advance. Non-payment of entrance fee, or subscription by any member within three months of election, shall entitle the Club-house to be opened and ready for the reception of members at 8 o'clock each morning, and finally closed at one the next morning, after which neither card-playing nor refreshments shall be permitted. No member to receive profit in any way from funds of club, under penalty of expulsion, nor any money or gratuity to be given to the servants of the club on any plea whatever. No member to take away from club any newspaper, books, pamphlets, &c. on any pretence. No provision cooked in the Club-house, or wines or liquors to be sent out for the use of any member. None but members to take refreshments in the Club-house. All members to pay their bills of expenses before they leave, and no account to open on account with any member, but to account to the Treasury daily for all monies passing through his hands. Members to complain of any defect in breakfast or dinner, or any improper conduct of servant by note or on the back of his bill. No game of Loos or Hazard shall on any account be played, nor dice used in the Club-house, (except to play at backgammon) and no card playing shall be permitted. The club shall be played for, nor any bet made exceeding ten shillings; any deviation for the two last mentioned rules to be attended with immediate expulsion. No member to bring a dog into, nor smoke in the Club-house. Any breach or damage of any article by any member to pay double the price cost.

As the Club-house of the Australian Club, which is at present forming, and considering the want of a Club-house we doubt not it will meet with the most sanguine wishes of the projectors.

AUSTRALIAN FLORAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—On Thursday evening the 7th June, a meeting of the above named society, was convened pursuant to adjournment, at Mr. Green's, in the room of the late Mr. Green, the Members assembled, and the President pro tem, Mr. Kenyon, having taken the chair, the business of the evening commenced by ten new members being added by ballot, to the already numerous list of subscribers, which amount to Fifty Three, although the society has scarcely yet obtained form and pressure. By the Report of the Treasurer, Mr. John Richards, it appeared that although many parties had paid their subscription of £1, still that a number had neglected in consequence of their not being aware of the necessity to pay up by the 1st June, no notice having been given by public advertisement to that effect. It was therefore moved, seconded, and unanimously carried, that the meeting should adjourn for the election of officers until the first Thursday in July, and that the present elected officers should continue to hold office until that time; and that notice should be given once in all the public Journals, that if those subscribers who had not yet paid up their subscriptions did not do so, their names would be erased from the society's book, and preclude them from having any vote in the election of officers. The thanks of the meeting having been given to Mr. Kenyon, for his able and impartial conduct in the chair, the meeting closed at the hour of ten o'clock in July, at which time all admirers and patrons of Floriculture and Horticulture, are requested most respectfully to give their attendance.

John Hall, for sneaking down and robbing a Mrs. Mullhall of seven and sixpence, with which she was going to satisfy her landlord's claims for the week, has been committed for trial.

CHARGE OF MUTINY ON BOARD THE "GULANA."—On Wednesday last eighteen seamen of the whaler Gulana, Captain Dolling, were brought by him before the Police charged with mutiny. It appeared from his statement that the vessel had been cruising eight or nine months and had not taken a single fish; he put into Amoy, and applied to the authorities to send the first and second officers out of the ship and control the men; the following morning Mr. Berner, the Harbour Master, and Mr. Ball, J. P. came on board and argued with the men, but they refused to obey orders; he wished the ship's berth moved, but they refused to weigh anchor. They also refused to spread the awning over a studding-sail boom on which the cook was sitting armed with a knife. To the charge of mutiny, the men were charged on Thursday in July, at which time all admirers and patrons of Floriculture and Horticulture, are requested most respectfully to give their attendance.

DANNO REDEVIVUS.—On Sunday morning about three o'clock, a man named John Kelly, having a couple of females laughing on to his arms, entered the shop of Martin the keeper of an eating-house in Market-street, which was open at that hour. Kelly upon entering, rubbed his hands and appeared upon the very best terms with himself, stating, that both himself and companions had just come off of the water, and that it was their intention to take supper; Martin was delighted as he observed Kelly's month watering at a tender resting pig, which was done to a turn and reposing in blissful ignorance and putting all things in order for a feed; "put down the pig," said Kelly, "and that brace of ducks, I think that will do," the viands were placed on the table according to order, and the guests having flung their legs under the mahogany, commenced despatching the viands with much relish. Kelly carved with much liberality and showed that he was not ignorant of the usages of a knife and fork, silence most profound reigned through the place, save the clattering of knives and forks; and once the exclamation of Kelly, "a pint of brandy, if you please." Martin did please and the Cognac was produced and acted as the ladies said, as a pacifier of the stuffing which the ducks had contained; this being ascended to upon all hands, it very quickly disappeared. The request being concluded, Kelly lolled back in his chair and fell into a broody study from which he awoke with, "I say landlord, confounded unpleasant, isn't it, why I've got no money." It is vastly unpleasant said Martin, but I'm not going to be hummed after that fashion, come shell out, Can't, said Kelly relating upon the most apt couple of pounds. "I shall send for a con second," picking his teeth with a three pronged fork, and rubbing down the calves of his legs with much complacency before the fire. The ladies thought that although the supper had been both good and pleasant, yet a night's lodging in the watch house would not by any means be a comfortable wind up to the evening's amusements, and walked accordingly, Kelly having arrived Kelly was asked if he was ready, to which he replied complacently, "undoubtedly," and quietly submitted to be locked up. When before the bench, his work clothes informed Martin, that if he kept his house open till three o'clock on Sunday morning and supplied parties with refreshments and spirits, he would not find the Police officers at the same, where he could obtain payment for the same.

A woman with a head as naked and as smooth as though it had been shaved, and a forehead with a slight thin line extending from temple to temple, intimating that her hair had been once there; the object of the smooth head appearing at the Police-office, to prevent its sustaining any further damage from its legal protector her husband, who had deprived her of "natures highest ornament." The venditor fish in a wheelbarrow, while she cooked, and remained for supper, but was in the habit of washing her face in the water, and the fish became burned and a handful of hair then, by which she became unclean on the occasion. But upon the faithful promise of the fishman to devote his time to fish, instead of annoying his wife he was allowed to depart, and in a few seconds afterwards he was heard shouting "fish alive, all alive!"

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1838.—Last night, between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, as the constabulary of this town, under the personal superintendance of the active and energetic chief constable, were taking their usual rounds, the number of Mr. Jilks was directed towards a group of native youths excited each other to acts of riot and disorder, and by their tumultuous cheering appeared determined to set at defiance the interference of constables or others; their conduct was such that rendered it imperative on Mr. Jilks to order the removal of the watch-house. One individual named Frazer, who was principally conspicuous during this disgraceful scene, during the Police to take him to the watch house, but after some trouble and difficulty he was at length captured. During the struggle he seized Mr. Jilks by the collar and attempted to throw him down, but failed. After his detention some of his confederates forming a portion of the group proceeded towards the watch house, evidently for an improper purpose, the constables, perceiving their intent, promptly frustrated their design, and took them into custody. This day they were brought before the Bench of Magistrates, and the case having been heard, they were committed to take their trials at the ensuing Quarter Sessions. "Too much praise cannot be awarded to Mr. Jilks for his general indefatigable exertions in putting down these scenes of riot and disorder, latterly so prevalent."—Correspondent.

On Monday a woman, named Mary Low, was caught in the act of carrying off a ham, clad in canvas, from a grocer's shop in King-street, which she wished to take to the Bench to understand it was falling from the mail from which it was suspended, and she merely caught it in her arms to prevent it being damaged by the fall; but their worship thought that the most correct course would be to send her to tell this tale to a jury.

Moran, for forging a cheque, purporting to be drawn by Mr. Willoughby Beau, in favor of a man named Peacock, was on Thursday fully committed for the offence. The cheque had been followed by Mr. Mann of Sussex-street.

A fellow named Swainson, lately from Norfolk Island, has been discovered to have committed the forgeries in the names of Dr. Bowman and Mr. Crown Solicitor Fisher. The Police are in search of him.

The man Harper, who found means to cut his lucky from the watch-house on Friday night, was captured on Saturday evening in Bridge-street, after a desperate resistance. He is committed for robbing his master's parlour of three half crowns.

We again consider it necessary, for the well being of the public, to call the attention of Major Barney, of the Royal Engineers, to the misconduct of a man named Bryan, who has fallen from the water pipes on the Royal Causeway, and who permits the continual overflow of despicable gross obscenity, gambling and other improper conduct. This has been complained of by the press in general, and it is therefore more surprising that notice has not been taken by Major Barney of the circumstance.

THE MILITARY.—On Tuesday night, the chief constable of Raymond Terrace was knocked down by two soldiers and robbed of two £1 notes and some silver.

THE MARYANN AVAILS!—On Tuesday night, as Mr. Coser and wife were seeing a lady home towards Prince-street, they were attacked by a drunken party of the 50th regiment named Sullivan, who assaulted Mr. C. and then struck the lady a blow, whom Mr. Coser was seeing home.

The Colonel says, that it is an exceedingly dangerous thing, to take too great notice of a female prisoner of the Crown, but notwithstanding the Colonel being of opinion that she is by no means a prostitute. Perhaps the Colonel may have found his doctrine true, and we hope it will be a warning to him.

It is surprising that in the very face of a notice posted at the Police Office, respecting Ticket-of-leave holders being out of their district, that so many men, so circumstanced, should be employed in the Sydney Police, in the very teeth of this regulation. We call the attention of the proper authorities to this circumstance.

Yesterday eight pens could be mustered in the Police Office between twenty-two clerks!!! The lady stock jobbers have been ordered to be kept as far apart from the gentlemen as possible, the Colonel being of opinion that the melody of their voices might destroy the effect of the punishment.

On Wednesday night, at 11 o'clock, a respectable man went to the shop of a chemist and druggist in Pitt street, and requested some medicine for his wife, who was lying dangerously ill; the young man who was in the shop came to the door and opened it, but when he heard what was required, he stated that they never served at so late an hour!!! The consequence was that the person so applying was under the necessity of proceeding further on his way, before he could obtain the required remedy. We call the attention of Judge Barton to this circumstance; understanding, as we do, that his Honor has, or intends, lying before the Council an Act relative to the medical body of the Colony. We think a clause making it imperative on any one of that class, who is invariably attend when called upon to administer to the sick.

The grand and final cricket match between the Union and Australian Clubs will come off, upon the usual ground, on Monday next. Betting upon the result is very high.

SPORTING.—A mill, upon which some hundreds changed hands, came off at Midbank, near Botany, on Thursday, between Gorrick, a native, and a man named Taylor, for £75 aside; the result was, that in 33 rounds the native polished off his antagonist to a nicety. The contest was good and met the approbation of the spectators. Better than this Italian assumption any day.

We call the attention of the public to the sale at public auction, by Mr. John Chadwick, of a splendid allotment of land at that eligible situation Miller's Point, having upon it a windmill and grainery in full repair, a substantial stone residence, and two wooden houses. Independent of which, the stone upon the property would let as a quarry from £150 to £200 per annum. A better investment for property is not open at the present time.

Bryan Flannigan, for the murder at Bathurst, and Dennis Huxford for robbery on the North Shore, have been ordered for Execution with Daniel Maloney and Thomas Ribbons on Friday next 15th instant.

The sentence of Death passed on Richard Norris and Patrick Quilty, at the late Sessions of the Supreme Court, have been commuted to Transportation to Norfolk Island, and they with 47 others were embarked by that place by the "Governor Phillip" yesterday.

There were 11 men and one woman received from the country yesterday, into the Sydney Gaol for Trial for various crimes. Amongst them two Aboriginal Blacks for Murder committed in the neighbourhood of Wellington Valley.

POLICE INCIDENTS.

Mary Groom was charged with having been found "going it" the overnight, which caused her appearance before the Bench. Colonel—So you and I are shipmates I think Mrs. Groom? Mary—Oh, yes your honor, but poor Bob is dead now—drowned the other day—sad affair. Colonel—Sad indeed—were you drunk? Mary—No, and his scandalous, I can't walk the streets without having my gown torn, look here (exhibiting a sadly tattered piece of calico, which might once have been a gown). Colonel—You were lying down, when taken into custody? Mary—Not at all, I was walking steadily home. Colonel—You must pay five shillings or go to the stocks for three days. Mary—I wish the devil had the stocks. Colonel—There, see what a liberty she takes with me because I'm her shipmate. Take her away.

John Godfrey Maelzer, Edward Fairburn.—Plaintiff is a justifier of each of the human shape in George street, and defendant is a Flat, according to the technicalities of the trade, and an importation of Mr. Maelzer's own from the London market, from which he arrived on the 21st Feb., he was too much of a gentleman and wore too tight a stock to be useful, although in a milliner's shop he might have been ornamental. The charge was, that this Fairburn the other men, the table given him was too low, the creases of the floor were open, and one of the panes of glass was broken, which admitted a draft, and he had a horrid antipathy to that (first time we ever heard of a tailor disliking a draft); in fact, he did not think the place at all fitted for him. Mr. Maelzer was willing to overlook the offence. The Flat appeared inclined to show off, but upon the Flat's mill being mentioned, and the loss of his flowing locks held out in perspective, he hung a lip and reluctantly consented to obey.

Overall R. Andrews.—Plaintiff is a journeyman, and defendant a master baker. About half-past three o'clock on Saturday morning, defendant came into the bakehouse and created a disturbance about a batch of bread; plaintiff told him to stand back, because he could not please him down; while stooping to tie his shoe to go away defendant came up to him with a fire-shovel and threatened to strike him with it. There was a push substantiated by a George Smith working in the same shop, and that plaintiff told defendant he wished he would strike him with the shovel, but he would have made so horrid a batch of bread that it was only fit to set forth before poultry and pigs. Defendant was fined 5s. for the push, and 7s. 6d. costs.
