were irrelevant. Here was in this short sentence a lecture for a Jury—and a merited one—which we never before, nor we trust never will again hear from the lips of a Judge. We at one time trembled for Whitfield, being of opinion that prejudice had found its way into the Jury box; but we were relieved from any apprehension we labored under on that head, when the Chairman, in concluding his address, stated that they (the Jury) "had no case before them that could warrant a conviction."—It is instances of this description that induces, and properly too, the selection of Military Jurors. In what we have said on the subject, we have not travelled out of the line of our duty. If individuals will sit on our Juries, they must always bear in mind, that they not only hold a responsible, but we may add a sacred character—and that in the discharge of the duty they owe their country humanity must not be overlooked.

SUPREME COURT.—Nothing interesting has taken place in the Civil side during the past week which would warrant us in troubling our readers with a detailed account. In the case of Bullivant versus Kinnear, and which lasted three days and in which, together with a Special Jury, no less than five Barristers exclusive of Solicitors were employed, and all over an ejectment case, relative to the retaining possession of a cottage in Cumberland, we are of opinion that if the defendant pays all costs, the cottage (for it is nothing more) will turn out an expensive affair. So much for litigation.—In the case of Kleinsodder against Macpherson, in an action of trover, a verdict was given for defendant, who appeared on the part of the Crown. The plaintiff in this case alleged that a flock of sheep sold by the Government for £980 at Liverpool in July, 1824, was his (plaintiff's) property. The Jury through their Foreman, with out waiting for the case being put, consulted the plaintiff.

Mr. Keck.—We feel much pleasure in bringing the humanity of this excellent individual under public notice; no man's sympathy can rival that of Mr. Keck's for the accused when on trial, more especially where a family may be sacrificed through the conviction of the parent. Humanity of this description is worth all the coercion human ingenuity can invent.

We request Mr. Mitchell we have the goodness to appoint an intelligent constable for the purpose of making proclamations and swearing witnesses at Quarter Sessions. Now, when Inspector Ryan did his duty, it saved both Court and Jury many unkind observations.

CONORON'S INQUEST.—An inquest was held on Monday morning at the house of Mr. Miller, "Blue Bull" Clarence-street, on the body of Ellen Smith, who came by her death about half past two on Sunday morning, produced by a fall from a step-ladder, in consequence of which a hemorrhage ensued. Verdict.—Died by suffocation.

NEW CHURCH, at NEW TOWN.—In laying the foundation stone of Saint Peter's Church at this delightful suburban on Monday, our English friends (at home) would be astonished at the selection of plate produced on this occasion, (in the bush) through the hospitality of A. B. Spark, Esq. Mr. Spark is not only a popular character, but a liberal one, and one of those with whom it is rare to meet with. On the occasion to which we allude, his hospitality was unbounded. After Bishop Broughton and his clerical attendants, and those of the upper classes of society were entertained, those in the humbler walks of life received every attention with a cheerful and hearty welcome. His Lordship laid the foundation with the usual formalities, and we never at that sacred an occasion for which we departed more gratified.

AN INQUIRY INTO THE DEATH OF MR. CRACKNELL.—How says Mr. Cracknell to a female who was in the witness box yesterday "do you get into your back part of me a gateway in the rear of the house on the reply—we congratulate Mr. Cracknell
