

appeared to be choking with delight, and thanked His Honor and the Gentlemen of the Jury, adding that it "would be a warning to him as long as he lived."

August 4th.—(Before his Honor Judge Burton, and a Civil Jury.)

Daniel Collins, John Welsh, and Edward Smith, stood indicted for stealing in a dwelling house sundry articles of apparel, the property of one Robert Fitzpatrick, and putting in bodily fear one James Shilling on the 9th December, 1837.—All Guilty. His Honor then addressed the prisoners in a very impressive manner, stating that if the offence, of which they stood charged, had been committed in England, they would in all probability have ended their lives on the gallows. Although there were other charges against them, that for which they had been tried on the previous day, and the one for which they were now before the Court, were considered quite enough to go into, to secure the ends of justice. Independent of the various robberies they had committed, the prisoners had absconded several times from their employments and finally took to the bush. His Honor then stated, that although he was about to pass the sentence of life to Norfolk Island on all of them, it would not prevent their receiving some indulgence from the Government, provided they menaced their lives.—Sentenced to be transported to Norfolk Island for life, with a recommendation that Collins and Smith be not allowed the indulgence.

Walter Neary, stood indicted for stealing in a dwelling house 19 sovereigns, 6 half-crowns, and a 5s. piece, the property of a man named Townsend, on the 18th June last.—Guilty. Fourteen years transportation.

William Royle, stood indicted for a highway robbery on one Thomas Wetherburn, taking from his person £2 5s. in Sydney, on the 18th of June last, near the Waterloo Mills, Botany. The prisoner at the time of the robbery was attached to a road party, and was employed after hours with others of the gang, to complete or leave in a secure state some work on which they had been employed during the day. According to the Overseer's (O'Bryne) evidence the prisoner was employed on the said work at the time, sworn to by the prosecutor, when the robbery was committed. A. B. Sparks, Esq. gave the prisoner a good character, and stated he saw the prisoner with others at work late in the afternoon when he passed to his residence. Acquitted.

(Before the Chief Justice and a Civil Jury.)

John Jones, was indicted for the wilful murder of one Thomas Day, having on the 3rd June last, struck the said Day several blows with a stick on the head, of the wounds from which he lingered until the 10th, and died—guilty of manslaughter. One of the witnesses named Glyn, having sworn that Jones never had a stick in his hand, and did not, on the occasion above stated, strike the deceased; the Attorney-General deemed it his duty to apply to His Honor to commit him for perjury—committed.

Henry Costello, stood indicted for an assault on Hercules Watt, of Sydney, on the 31st May last, with intent to murder him: the second count charged him with an assault, with intent to do him some grievous bodily harm—guilty. On the second count—to be worked in irons for three months, and at the expiration of the sentence, to find security for his good behaviour for the period of twelve months.

(Before Mr. Justice Willis and a Civil Jury.)

Monday, 6th August, 1838.

Robert Tubb and Samuel Dearden, were indicted for a highway robbery, on the person of Mr. James Burn, a butcher of Penrith, on the 23rd May last—guilty, death recorded. His Honor recommended that they be transported to Norfolk Island for life.

James King, stood indicted for shooting, with intent to injure William Henry Peacock at Penrith, on the 23rd May last—guilty, sentence of death recorded.

John Dignam, alias Henry Jennings, (the accomplice of Comerford), stood indicted for stealing from the hut of a Mr. Aiken, sundry articles of consumption, on the 29th of May, 1837.—Guilty of larceny. Remanded on a charge of horse stealing.

"The Estate of Hunter's Hill," on the North Shore of Port Jackson.

To Gentlemen, Capitalists, Retired Tradesmen, Market Gardeners, Nurserymen, Dairy and Milkmen, Sawyers, Woodmen, &c. &c.

BY A. POLACK, At his Rooms, THIS DAY, the 8th of August, at Eleven o'clock precisely,

ALL that most valuable and highly desirable ESTATE, named

HUNTER'S HILL, containing an aggregate quantity of nearly One Thousand Acres of Land, consisting of various Grants of the Crown during the Administration of Governors Hunter, King, and Macquarie, lying and situated in the District of Lane Cove, now called the Parish of WILLOUGHBY, about a mile distant from Nichols' Well-stone-creek; Billy Bine's, Wilson's, Kirk's, Hicks', and Gore's Wharves, in the broad water of the above-named Cove.

As this Estate is so very extensive, and commands so many innumerable advantages in the daily rising neighbourhood in which it lies, the Proprietor, with a view of accommodating the Public, has had the same divided into Sixty-eight spacious Allotments, varying in contents from fourteen to five acres each. Twenty-four of these have frontages to the high roads from the above-named wharves to Neutral, Middle, North, and other harbours, Black-bay, and Point, Penman's Hills, Parramatta, &c., and varying in contents agreeably to locality, some of them being bounded on other sides by the various fresh water streams with which this district abounds. Eleven other of these lots have frontages to the Government road leading from the above described one to Tambourine wharf; and the remaining thirty-three are bounded on one of their sides by reserved roads leading to the main ones, the great extent of which have other blocks bounding them on other sides, or water running through them.

The Auctioneer taking into consideration the important site of these most delightful plots of ground, feels himself at a loss in sufficiently describing the various qualifications they possess. That this portion will ultimately form a part of North Sydney, is beyond the shadow of a doubt; consequently, must become valuable beyond present human imagination.

To the Capitalist this Estate is particularly recommended, as the various Buildings, Wharves, Gardens, and other improvements of late made in the district, fully prove the daily rising value of the same, as it is notorious that during the past two years land situated therein has increased in value two and three hundred per cent. It must also be borne in mind that the Crown has no more land they intend to dispose of—what it retains has been judiciously reserved for the benefit of the intended New Town, a plan of which was some time since made and drawn by Major Mitchell.

To Gentlemen in Public Offices, or Tradesmen in retired or easy circumstances, most of these Allotments cannot be excelled for pleasant sites for houses and cottages, as the ridge on which the high road is situated commands a perfect panoramic view of Sydney and its environs, the harbour of Port Jackson and other waters; at the same time they have a sufficient quantity of Land attached to them for the formation of Gardens and Pleasure Grounds, as the lay of the same is undulating, and Park-like in appearance. The respectability of the neighbourhood is also too well known to require eulogium. For Sporting Lodges also few spots surpass it.

Gardeners, Nurserymen, Dairymen, or Milkmen would also find this Estate very eligible, as the Land is proverbial for its richness, excellent pasture and good water; the convenience also of conveying produce to market is also too well known to require comment; half-an-hour's water carriage will convey the same to the Market-Wharf.

Master Sawyers and Woodmen would also find some of these Allotments worthy their particular attention, as the Timber, which is proverbially excellent and various in description, has been carefully preserved; and as the Head of "Banks Bay" is on this Estate, carriage to the water will be extremely easy.

It has been endeavoured to give a brief description of the Estate, and as the Allotments have been distinctly staked out by an eminent Surveyor, & their distance from Sydney so very small, the Public are invited to inspect them prior to the day of sale, as they will bear the strictest scrutiny.

A Plan drawn by Mr. Beml, showing the exact boundaries, water-courses, &c., lies for inspection at the Office of the Auctioneer.

Terms made known at the time of sale.

Two Houses in Castlereagh-street.

A. POLACK, in recommending the above to the notice of the Public, begs to remark, that the above is a most favorable opportunity for the investment of Capital, as Property in that part of the Town is daily increasing in value, and must eventually remunerate the Purchaser very handsomely.

Nine Acres at New Town.

BY A. POLACK, On THURSDAY, the 9th August, at twelve o'clock precisely, immediately after the Sale of the two Houses in Castlereagh-street, and on those Premises, NINE Acres & One Rood of Land at New Town, divided into three allotments, on one of which has been erected a handsome Verandah Cottage, containing four Rooms, with a good garden and pure well of water attached thereto. There is also on this property an orchard containing a variety of the most choice fruit trees, which have been collected at considerable trouble and expense.

A. Polack, in recommending the above to the notice of the Public, and looking forward to the time when New Town will form a portion of the metropolis, and taking into consideration the immense sums of money which have been, and will continue to be daily expended in building, clearing, fencing, horticulture, &c., and that in almost every instance, by competent judges, has no hesitation in asserting that this opportunity of purchasing must prove a desirable one.

To Civil Officers or Persons in independent circumstances wanting the combined qualities of a rural abode in the vicinity of the Capital, a more delightful situation could not be wished for. It is also worthy the peculiar notice and attention of Capitalists, Builders, &c. from its contiguity to the heart of Sydney, as also its pleasant, healthy, and respectable situation, being contiguous to the splendid properties of John Lord, Esq., David Chambers, Esq., Captain Brown, the Petersham Estate, &c. It should also be borne in mind that Major Mitchell's projected line of new road to Parramatta, Liverpool, &c. is marked through the same.

Further particulars to be had on reference to the Auctioneer.

GRANT FROM THE CROWN.

To Merchants, Brokers, Wharfingers, Whalers, and Others.

A. POLACK, BEGS leave to notify to the Mercantile Community of New South Wales and its Dependencies, that he has received direct instructions from the Proprietors to submit to Public Competition at Twelve o'clock, precisely, on WEDNESDAY, the 15th day of August ensuing, on the Ground, all that Splendid and Unrivalled Waterside Premises situate to all the world as

Aspinall & Browne's Wharf, Situate in a most secured and protected part of DARLING HARBOUR,

Having an extensive frontage thereto of several hundred feet, as well as the same, having an excellent METALLED ROAD leading to Windmill-street, near its junction with Kent-street, North. On it stands erected an extensive SUGAR WAREHOUSE, a SALT STORE, an extensive WOOL WAREHOUSE, several SAIL LOFTS, & a well of excellent Water 200 feet deep, and among other essential requisites for such an extensive Establishment.

An Hydraulic Press of 200 Horse Power, with Cranes, Pulleys, Blocks, &c., complete.

It is a well known fact, that such another Wharf, for convenience and protection from all winds, cannot be found in the Colony, as Merchant Vessels of the greatest tonnage which ever arrived in the Harbour of Port Jackson, have laid close alongside in perfect security in the heaviest weather ever experienced.

The Warehouse and Stores Also on the Wharf, have been erected with judgment and convenience, and are also some of the most extensive that can be found in Sydney being in fact sufficiently capacious to RECEIVE and RE-PACK the WHOLE of the ANNUAL PRODUCE of WOOL in New South Wales, without at all disturbing the parts appropriated for the storage of OIL, PITCH, TAR, IRON, and other descriptions of Stores.

TO GENTLEMEN ENGAGED IN WHALING PURSUITS, Such another opportunity is never likely to again present itself being not only at the date hereof sufficiently complete for all purposes required but also may be almost certain of being the future depot for an extensive WHALING ESTABLISHMENT, which, it is daily anticipated, will be formed in England, when the resale of this very eligible property would, if no longer required, realize beyond the shadow of a doubt, an independent fortune.

For a DRY DOCK, a PATENT SLIP, or a SHIP-BUILDER'S YARD, on an extensive scale, these premises have not their superior in the colony.

A. P. in making these few remarks, is perfectly satisfied of his incompetency to point out the many other advantages this most invaluable property possesses; but he is confident the mercantile community are so well acquainted with the same, that any eulogium on his part is unnecessary; suffice it to say, that as the same will be disposed of without any reserve, the TERMS, which are among the MOST LIBERAL EVER OFFERED, are as follow, viz.—Ten per cent. cash deposit on the fall of the hammer; for one third of the remaining sum, approved bills at three, six, nine, and twelve months from the day of the sale, with security on the property if required. The remaining two thirds may remain on mortgage for ten years, at bank interest.

Further particulars made known at the time of sale.

LOWER CANADA.

The following account of a most inhuman attack of the British Soldiers, on defenceless and unoffending Canadians, we have extracted from the New York Enquirer of the 6th of January last. If really, the statement given below be correct, what may we not expect will be the result? For, surely, after such an un-English slaughter the Canadians will not rest satisfied until they have blood for blood.
Our soil Invalued.—Burning of the Steamer Caroline —Butchery of 20 American Citizens by Loyal Troops.

The startling intelligence brought by express from Buffalo on Saturday night is more than confirmed! What was then deemed incredible, is proved to be horrid reality! Our shores have been invaded! An American vessel has been attacked, set on fire, and sent over the Falls of Niagara by a foreign force. Unarmed American citizens have been brutally butchered by British soldiers! and their death must be avenged. The Lion of England cannot feast upon the blood of freemen with impunity! Twice already has he been bearded by the Eagle of the North, and again must his pride be brought low by the strong arm of the free! The horrid details of this damning outrage, as we have them from an eyewitness are these:—On Friday afternoon the steam boat Caroline, Captain Appleton, came down from Buffalo to Scholster, with passengers, and subsequently passed over to Navy Island, with a party of gentlemen, who wished to visit the island. Before dark she again returned to Scholster where she was to lay during the night. The tavern accommodations at the place being limited, and a large number of persons having collected there out of curiosity, under the expectation that an attack would be made during the night upon the island, all the berths in the boat were made up (twenty), and fifteen or twenty mattresses spread upon the floor. These were all filled, as the steward asserts, and several besides were known to be asleep under the awning upon the deck. The whole number on board, could not have been less than 45 to 50. Some 10 or 20 of them are missing. They were without doubt murdered, and have gone over the Falls. At 12 o'clock all appeared in a profound slumber. A few minutes after that hour, however, the boat was attacked by what appeared to be five eight-voiced boats, each containing from 10 to 15 regular British troops in naval uniforms.

Captain Handy of Buffalo, was awake by the tumult below; and immediately upon discovering his danger made for the companion-way. Before however he reached the deck he was met by a soldier, whose arms he caught hold of, making the remark that it was not possible he would attack an unarmed man, but he had scarcely made the remark, when he was struck a blow upon the head with a sabre, which laid bare his skull for several inches, and knocked him again back into the cabin. The ruffian accompanied the blow with this remark—"There, take that, and go to hell, you d-d rebel." He fell upon the body of a black man, who had been killed by the murderers; he soon, however, regained his feet, leaped from the state window, and swam to the shore. Captain Handy had on a fur cap, with a thick front piece, which, doubtless, saved his life. Captain King, of Buffalo, after having reached the deck, had a sabre aimed at his head. To guard the blows he raised his right arm, and the sabre fell upon his shoulder leaving a frightful gash. Another blow followed, which nearly severed him from the wrist. He, however, escaped, but is not expected to live. Captain Applebee also reached the deck, but was knocked over-board by a blow upon the head from a musket. Although severely stunned, Captain Applebee succeeded in swimming to the shore. The engineer escaped from the boat; but in his retreat he received a stab from a bayonet. Two hands leaped from a window, and escaped unharmed. Captain Case, who owns the Caroline, also escaped uninjured, as did also two or three others. Horrid as are the details already given, the most diabolical act remains yet to be told. Upon the discovery of the tumult, many in the cabin attempted to hide from the monsters who were murdering their associates so indiscriminately. Among these was the cabin-boy of the boat, an interesting lad of twelve years. He secreted himself in a cupboard, but he was soon discovered, upon which he fell upon his knees and begged for his life, innocently remarking, "You ain't going to kill me, are you?" The brutish reply was, "We give no quarter," and he was run through the body with a bayonet with such force as to penetrate the back part of the cupboard. A slash or two from a sabre followed and the innocent boy slept the sleep of death. This scene was observed by Captain King, who remarked that of all the scenes of peril and death which he had witnessed, that was most savage and awful. When the work of slaughter and death was complete, the murderers plundered the boat, broke up the cabin furniture, set her on fire, towed her out into the Falls. When she reached the centre of the river, she was a solid mass of fire. The flames continued to ascend with terrific sublimity, until she reached the rapids on the west side of Goat Island. She then broke in pieces, and in a moment all was total darkness. Several gentlemen who witnessed the heart-rending spectacle affirm, that while the boat was in flames they saw persons moving upon the deck. As soon as the fire on the boat was visible, the murderers gave three cheers for "Victoria," a large transparent signal was raised at Chippewa, to guide the direction of the boats to the harbour, and reiterated shouts were distinctly heard from the British troops. And yet in a despatch received from Mr. Nabb by Mr. Garrow, marshal of this district, it is said that the destruction of the boat was unauthorised. If so, the 50 or 60 murderers will be delivered up to justice. If they are not, there is a law of redress which can be put in force.

aged donkey that carries home her linen, but every cat, dog, or bird, every variety of domestic pet that she finds in the different houses where she works, immediately following the strange instinct by which animals as well as children, discover who likes them, makes up to and courts Olive Hathaway. There's a magic about her placid smile and her sweet low voice, no sulkiness of bird or beast can resist their influence.
And Olive hath abundance of pets in return, from my greyhound Mayflower, downwards; and indeed takes the whole animal world under her protection, whether pets or no; begs off condemned kittens, nurses sick ducklings, will give her last penny to prevent an unlucky urchin from taking a bird's nest; and is cheated and laughed at for her tender-heartedness, as is the way of the world in such cases.
Yes, Olive will certainly be and old maid, and a happy one—content and humble, and cheerful and beloved. What can woman desire more?

the country. One could swear to the touch of her skillful fingers, when in disentangling the delicate complexity of a point-lace cap, or in bringing out the bolder beauties of a cut-work collar—one could swear to her handiwork just as safely as a bank clerk may do to the calligraphy of a monied man on 'Change, or an amateur in art to the handling of a great master. There was no mistaking her touch. Things ironed by her looked as good as new, some said better; and her aunt's trade thrived apace. But Olive had a trade of her own. Besides her accomplishments as a laundress, she was an incomparable needle-woman; could construct a shirt between sunrise and sunset; had a genuine genius for mantua-making; a real taste for millinery; was employed in half the houses round as a dressmaker at the rate of eightpence a-day; devoting by far the greater part of her small earnings to the comforts of her father, a settled inhabitant of the workhouse at Aberleigh. A harmless and willing creature was poor William Hathaway; and a useful one in his little way: for my part, I cannot think what they would have done without him at the workhouse, where he filled the several departments of man and maid of all-work, digging the garden, dressing the dinner, running on errands, and making the beds. Still less can I imagine how the boys could have dispensed with him; the ten-year-old urchins with whom he played at cricket every evening, and where the kind and simple old man, with his lean, tall person, his pale, withered face, and grizzled beard, was the fag and favourite of the party, the noisiest and merriest of the crew. A useful and a happy man was poor William Hathaway, albeit the proud and the worldly wise hold him in scorn; happiest of all on the Sunday afternoons, when he came to dine with his daughter and her good aunt Rachael, and receive the pious dolo, the boarded half-pence or the "splendid shilling," which it was her delight to accumulate for his little pleasures, and which he, child-like in all his ways, spent like a child on cakes and gingerbread.

There was no fear of the source failing; for gentle, placid, grateful, and humble, considerate beyond her years, and skilful far beyond her opportunities, every one liked to employ Olive Hathaway. The very sound of her crutch in the court, and her modest tap at the door, inspired a kindly, almost a tender, feeling for the afflicted and defenceless young creature whom patience and industry were floating so gently down the rough stream of life. Her person, when seated, was far from unpleasant, though shrunken and thin from delicacy of habit, and slightly leaning to one side from the constant use of the crutch. Her face was interesting from feature and expression, in spite of the dark and perfectly colourless complexion, which gave her the appearance of being much older than she really was. Her eyes, especially, were full of sweetness and power, and her long straight hair parted on the forehead, and twisted into a thick knot behind, gave a statue-like grace to her head, that accorded ill with the coarse straw bonnet, and brown stuff gown, of which her dress was usually composed. There was in truth, a something elegant and refined in her countenance; and the taste that she displayed, even in the homeliest branches of her own homely heart, fully sustained the impression produced by her appearance. If any of our pretty damsels wanted a particularly pretty gown, she had only to say to Olive, "make it according to your own fancy;" and she was sure to be arrayed, not only in the very best fashion (for our little mantua-maker had an instinct which led her at once to the right model, and could distinguish at a glance between the elegance of a countess, and the finery of her maid), but with the nicest attention to the becoming in colour and in form.

Her taste was equally just in all things. She would select, in a moment, the most beautiful flower in a garden, and the finest picture in a room; and going about as she did, all over the village, hearing new songs and new stories from the young, and old tales and old ballads from the aged, it was remarkable that Olive, whose memory was singularly tenacious for what she liked, retained only the pretty lines or the striking incidents. For the bad or the indifferent she literally had no memory; they passed by her as the idle wind, that she regarded not. Her fondness for poetry, and the justness of taste which she displayed in it, exposed poor Olive to one serious inconvenience: she was challenged as being a poetess herself; and although she denied the accusation earnestly, blushing, even fearfully, and her accusers could bring neither living witness nor written document to support their assertion, yet so difficult is it to disprove that particular calumny, that, in spite of her reiterated denial, the charge passes for true in Aberleigh to this very hour.

Such was and such is Olive Hathaway, the humble and gentle village mantua-maker; and such she is likely to continue; for, too refined for the youths of her own station, and too unpretty to attract those above her, it is very clear to me that my friend Olive will be an old maid. There are certain indications of character, too, which point to that as her destiny: a particular respect for her tools of office, which renders the misplacing a needle, the loss of a pin, or the unwinding half an inch of cotton, an evil of no small magnitude; a fidgety exactness as to plaits and gathers; a counting of threads and comparing of patterns, which our notable housewives, who must complain of something, grumble at as waste of time; a horror of shreds and a litter, which distinguishes her from all other mantua-makers that ever sewed a seam; and, lastly, a love of animals, which has procured for her the friendship and acquaintance of every four-footed creature in the neighbourhood. This is the most suspicious symptom of all. Not only is she followed and idolised by the poor old cur which Rachael Strong keeps to guard her house, and the still more

OLIVE HATHAWAY.
A VILLAGE SKETCH.
One of the principal charms of this North-of-Hampshire country consists in the infinite variety of wooded lanes, which wind along from farm to farm, and from field to field, intersecting each other with an intricacy so perplexing, and meandering with such a surprising round-about-ness, that one often seems turning one's back directly on the spot to which one is bound. For the most part the rough and narrow ways, devoted merely to agricultural purposes, are altogether unpeopled, although here and there a lone barrow forming a characteristic termination to some winding lane, or solitary habitation adds a fresh interest to the picture.
These lanes, with their rich hedgerows, their slips of flowery greensward, and their profound feeling of security and retirement, have long been amongst my favourite walks; and Farley-lane is perhaps the prettiest and pleasantest of all, the shadiest in warm weather, and the most sheltered in cold, and appears doubly delightful by the transition from the exposed and open common from which it leads.
It is a deep, narrow, unfrequented road, by the side of a steep hill, winding between small enclosures of pasture land on one side, and the grounds of the great house, with their picturesque paling and rich plantations, on the other; the depth and undulations of the wild cart-track giving a singularly romantic and secluded air to the whole scene, whilst occasionally the ivied pollards and shining holly-bushes of the hedgerow, mingle with the laurels, and cedars, and fine old firs, of the park, forming, even in mid-winter, a green arch over head, and contrasting vividly with a little sparkling spring, which runs gurgling along by the side of the pathway. Towards the centre of the lane rises an irregular thatched cottage, with a spacious territory of garden and orchard, to which you ascend, first by a single plank thrown across the tiny rivulet, and then by five or six steep steps cut in the bank—an earthen staircase. This has been as long as I can remember, the habitation of old Rachael Strong, a laundress of the highest reputation in Aberleigh, and of her young niece, Olive Hathaway. It is just possible that my liking for the latter of these personages may have somewhat biased my opinion of the beauty of Farley-lane.

Olive Hathaway has always appeared to me a very interesting creature. Lame from her earliest childhood, and worse than an orphan—her mother being dead, and her father, from mental infirmity, incapable of supplying her place—she seemed prematurely devoted to care and suffering. Always gentle and placid, no one ever remembered to have seen Olive gay. Even that merriest of all hours—the noon-day play-time, at school—passed gravely and sadly with the little lame girl. A book, if she could borrow one, if not, knitting or working for her good aunt Rachael, was her only pastime. She had no troop of play-fellows, no chosen companion—joined in none of the innocent cabal or mischievous mirth of her comrades; and yet every one liked Olive, even although cited by her mistress as a pattern of sempstress-ship and good conduct—even although held up as that odious thing, a model—no one could help loving poor Olive, so entirely did her sweetness and humility disarm envy and nullify scorn.
On leaving school she brought home the same good qualities, and found them attended by the same results. To Rachael Strong her assistance soon became invaluable. There was not such an ironer in
