

Twenty-five Pounds Reward.

WHEREAS some evil-disposed person has surreptitiously possessed himself of several Cards of Invitation for the Harmonic Society held at my Hotel, and inserted the name of a Government officer as president, and has enclosed the same to several high Government functionaries; a Reward of Twenty-five Pounds will be paid on conviction of the party or parties.

M. J. DAVIES.

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

To the Editor of the "Sydney Herald," SIR,—In your paper of this day there appeared a paragraph respecting the man Rellis being robbed at the rear of the Currency Lass by some soldiers, and that he lies dangerously ill in hospital through drinking adulterated liquor; any person reading the paragraph alluded to, may imagine he drank at my house, consequently it may be the means of injuring me in my business. I positively assure you the man Rellis never tasted spirits of any kind in my house, as he was quite drunk when he came in; therefore he was not served with any.

Three respectable witnesses can vouch for the veracity of this statement. By giving publicity to it you will much oblige, Your obedient servant, ROBERT CUMMINS. Currency Lass, George-street, Sydney, Oct. 21, 1838.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Five Dock Farm. J. T. WILSON Hastens to announce to the Australian World that he has been honored with instructions to bring to public competition, a portion of this VALUABLE PROPERTY, on TUESDAY, the 30th of October, 1838, at half-past eleven for twelve o'clock, precisely, at his extensive Rooms, No. 74, George-street,

THE first part of which consists of Lot 130 of Lyons' celebrated Sale of 1837, measuring in all 39 acres 2 roods and 19 perches, which for the convenience of purchasers is now divided into 14 allotments as follows, each an acre by a reserved road of half a chain wide, affording easy ingress thereto and egress therefrom.

Lot 1—Measuring 4 acres 4 perches is bounded on the north by the old Government Stone Quarry Wharf. Lot 2—Measuring 4 acres 1 rood 25 perches, and has a frontage of 5 chains to the Iron Cove.

Lot 3 contains A. R. P. 4 6 0 3 5 2 3 8 6 2 3 8 7 2 3 38 8 3 38 9 2 3 38 10 3 3 22 11 4 2 19 12 4 0 13 13 2 3 27 14 4 0 11

The second part of this Sale is Lot 82 in the original plan of sales, January 1828, which is also divided into convenient portions for present purchasers, consisting of 9 Lots, of sizes as follows:—

Lot 1 contains A. R. P. 3 1 32 2 2 1 24 3 3 3 8 4 3 0 0 5 3 0 0 6 2 2 16 7 2 1 35 8 2 1 24 9 5 0 13

The above is a brief description of the Lots as they are now laid out, and from the great care which has been taken by the Surveyor to ensure to each Lot an equal share of Panoramic Scenery, doubtless much competition for their possession will result.

Upon this Land are advantages scarcely to be found on any other property in the Colony. A Large Fish Pond has formed itself upon one of the Allotments formerly The Old Government Quarry, into which the tide ebbs and flows, where may be seen the various kinds of fish sporting in their native element, and the purchaser of this allotment will have the advantage of sitting at his own door procuring supplies of MULLET, WHITING, &c.

One of the greatest advantages upon this property is the abundance of FRESH WATER which even in the driest season is always plentiful; it will be therefore obvious to the dullest observer that the establishment of a DAIRY upon this Land, so near to the Metropolis, would ensure to the projector a certain and Speedy Independence

To the Market Gardener an opportunity is now afforded of establishing himself on Land of excellent quality, and almost within a stone's throw of Sydney, where, in a few years he may retire after the realization of his industry of a comfortable subsistence, with a certainty, that he improves the land yearly, so will it return to him tenfold, by its enhancing equally in value.

To the Mechanic and Shopkeeper residing in Sydney, it offers one of the most valuable opportunities of obtaining Land at a credit (which is in fact capital) which he can pay for without straitening his purse strings, an inheritance rising daily in value which is certain, from the fact of many of the Allotments sold at former sales having realised already nearly ONE HUNDRED PER CENT, upon their original price.

Eulogium on this Land would however be superfluous, as every person in the Colony must be well acquainted with the intrinsic merits of the FIVE DOCK FARM.

J. T. W. has therefore cursorily remarked upon a few of the purposes to which it is applicable, and he trusts the newly arrived Emigrant who may be unacquainted with the Property, will avail himself of seeing it prior to the Sale, so as to prevent the opportunity escaping him of becoming its possessor—one word more the Auctioneer would add, that this is almost certain to be the last Lot of this Land which will be offered to the Public.

The Title begins with a Grant from the Crown to Dr. Harris. Conditions and Terms at Sale.

NEW ZEALAND PINE. J. T. WILSON Acquaints the Ship Builders, Contractors for Public and other Buildings, and Carpenters, that he has been honored with instructions to bring to Public Competition, on WEDNESDAY next, the 31st day of October, at the Building Yard of Mr. Harper, Sussex-street, 40,000 FEET of superior COWRIE PINE, in lots to suit Purchasers.

The above Timber is adapted to the purposes of either. Maiden Ewes. In addition to the Sale of Cattle, On TUESDAY, the 31st instant, J. T. WILSON Will sell by Auction the undermentioned valuable Ewes, viz.— 300 MAIDEN EWES, 18 months old, in Lamb, to Lamb in all February 100 Ewes, 2½ years old, in Lamb 100 Ewes, full mouthed, also in Lamb

These Ewes are perfectly healthy and sound, and not only free from Scab, but warranted never to have been diseased; they are now ranging at Maneroo, and whether sold with the Wool on or off will be determined at the time of sale. The Purchaser must remove them within 28 days from the day of sale, or be at his risk and expense after that time has expired. Terms declared at time of sale.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Evening Sale OF BOOKS. TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, BY J. T. WILSON, On the Evening of WEDNESDAY, the 31st instant, at his extensive Rooms, 74, George-street, at half-past Six for Seven o'clock, SEVEN CASES OF BOOKS, by the most approved Authors.

J. T. W. would especially call the attention of the reading portion of the Public, to the books of this Sale, forming one of the most extensive collections ever offered to their notice. N. B.—This opportunity should not pass unnoted, as it is quite uncertain when J. T. W. may appear before the public of New South Wales again, as vendor of books. Catalogues will be ready on Tuesday morning next, at the Offices of the Auctioneer. Terms at Sale.

Sale of Sundries. J. T. WILSON Informs the Dealers and Others, that he has been instructed to Sell by Public Auction, on THURSDAY next, the 1st day of November, immediately after the other Sales, A LARGE quantity of ARTILLERY HARNESS Nails assorted Bedding of various kinds Staves for Casks Prison Doors Cast Iron Old Casks Ditto Casks

WILSON Will Sell by Auction, THIS DAY, at his extensive Rooms, 74, George-street, immediately after the Large Sale of Household Furniture, EXCELLENT TIMOR PONY GIGS, handsomely lined, with patent axles, and painted beautifully Two Stanhopes ditto ditto Ditto ditto ditto Two Four-wheeled Phaetons, nearly new, in first-rate condition, for immediate use. Terms at Sale.

To the Capitalists, Speculators in Land, and those in want of a comfortable Homestead within four miles of RICHMOND. J. T. WILSON Announces that he has been instructed by the Proprietor, to submit to Public Competition, on THURSDAY, the 1st day of November next, at his extensive Rooms, No. 74, George-street, at half past 10 for 11 o'clock, ALL that Piece, or Parcel of LAND, containing by admeasurement 7 acres, 3 rds, 13 ps., on the Northern Road in the County of Cumberland, and having a frontage to the Northern Road of 6 chains 99 links. This Property is situated on the GREAT NOTHERN ROAD, between Richmond and Penrith, bounded on the one side by the Property of George Bowman, Esq.; has a frontage of 462 feet to the Road, and is in the immediate vicinity of Parish of Londonderry, and is in the immediate vicinity of Ham Common—a Government Reserve containing about 10 000 ACRES; and it is only divided from Ham Common by Mr. Bowman's 100 acres. Thus the advantages to be derived from this unrivalled SHEEP AND CATTLE RUN, are beyond description.

A Speculator in this Property may consequently have the joint advantages of conducting a business in the Township—of having his Crops growing on the Farm, and his Cattle upon the Run—all within half an hour's ride from HIS DWELLING HOUSE. To the thinking mind, these advantages in a season like the present, of a treble occupation, is too obvious to need any remark from the Auctioneer—but how glorious would be the harvest gathered from the joint speculation in a season when the land supported by Heaven's Refreshing Showers; then indeed would all be gladness in the field, in the fold, in the home. The soil is a rich alluvial flat, and adapted to the growth of wheat—in fact, 'tis the opinion of the most experienced in this part of the colony that, for years to come, this Land will improve by cropping, and it has the advantage of easy access to the Market of the Metropolis.

To any person desirous of possessing the pleasures of the country with the delights of A Splendid Township, this simple spot is invaluable, and if at the present day it may be so considered, what will be its value when the projected Flies and Rail Roads are introduced into New South Wales, traversing as is were on the Wings of the Wind, and thus bringing this Property within the control of an evening's Fox Party, or soiree. 'Tis improvements such as these which will bind together in golden links the Society of this 'tis such as these will treble, quick as the lightning's flash, Property situate like the above. To the invalid it is peculiarly suitable, as its healthful situation joined to its proximity to the Township afford opportunities which are not to be met with generally, and to Speculators it offers a splendid investment for Capital. * * * Title unexceptionable. Terms and conditions at Sale.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Superior Gentlemen's Apparel. J. T. WILSON Announces to the gentlemen of New South Wales that he has been honored with instructions to sell by Public Auction, on THURSDAY next, the 1st day of November, at Half past 10 for 11 o'clock, 4 CASES SUPERIOR LONDON-MADE GENTLEMEN'S CLOTHES, CONSISTING OF— Black, Dress and Surtout Coats Blue ditto ditto ditto Coloured ditto ditto ditto Fancy White and other Vests Cusinere ditto ditto Drill, Jean, and other Trousers Korseymere ditto ditto And a variety of other clothing. The above Clothes J. T. W. with confidence recommends to gentlemen of taste as being excellent in quality, first-rate cut, and superior workmanship. Terms at Sale.

Windsor and Parramatta. J. T. WILSON Begs to call the attention of Capitalists, Retail Tradesmen, and others, to the undermentioned Property, which he has been instructed to dispose of, on the most advantageous terms, by Private Contract; and if not shortly sold, to bring to competition, in all November next, A NEATLY built two-story BRICK HOUSE, containing four rooms, a detached kitchen containing three rooms, a two-stall stable, and a Store. The above Property is situated in Macquarie-street, Parramatta, and is worthy the attention of all parties desirous of purchasing a Home or speculating in Landed Property. It is worthy remarking that Parramatta ranks second to this Capital in wealth and enterprise; that Property has within the last five years fully trebled its value; and that Town Allotments have proved the most lucrative investment for capital.

J. T. W. has been also instructed by the Proprietor to offer, in like manner, first by Private Contract, and if not Sold, by Public Auction in all November, A VALUABLE FARM, consisting of one hundred Acres; it is situated at Nelson, and bounded by the Windsor Common, and a never failing supply of Water, being a CHAIN OF PONDS, so that even in the driest seasons, there is an abundance of this necessary article. From its location it is invaluable, being situated only three miles from WINDSOR, and two from Pitt Town. The soil is so well known to the Inhabitants and Farmers residing in the environs of WINDSOR AND PITT TOWN, that J. T. Wilson deems it almost a waste of words to offer any remarks thereon—but he cannot omit to mention that in the early days of this colony the supplies of wheat for the whole country were grown in this district alone, and that this neighbourhood was then selected as the most Fertile Part of the Colony. It is folly to proceed enumerating further the numberless advantages of this Property as they are so extended, and so much could the Auctioneer say respecting them, that it would require a supplement to the daily publications to contain them; he therefore withholds further description satisfied that no boy of twelve years of age, but must at one glance see the truth of the remarks. Terms of Sale and other particulars may be known on application at the Offices, 74, George-street.

WOLLONGONG. J. T. WILSON HAS much pleasure in announcing to the Australian World that he has received instructions from the Proprietor to dispose of, by Private Contract, and if not shortly sold, to bring to the hammer on an early day, of which due notice will be given, A BEAUTIFUL COTTAGE erected on a half-acre allotment in the flourishing and daily increasing TOWNSHIP OF WOLLONGONG, and as the resort of the HAUT TON OF AUSTRALIA. The Situation is beyond description healthy and delightful, and its proximity to the Beach renders it peculiarly available for exercise, either pedestrian or equestrian. The surrounding country is studded over with the Villas of the most respectable part of the community, and thus if the purchaser should desire to recruit his health during the SULTRY SUMMER, he can steal to his Cot, and though in retirement, may, by the excellent Society of the neighbourhood, be kept from "ennuis" so frequently complained of in many parts of the Colony. J. T. W. must not omit to point out the circumstance of its being in contemplation to establish this as one of the Watering places of this rising country, indeed Wollongong has so long been celebrated for its SEA BATHING, that some of the wisest heads of New South Wales have, years gone by, foretold that it must eventually be the BRIGHTON OF AUSTRALIA; and there is sufficient land for the establishment of a Splendid Garden, large enough to supply the Family with every description of Vegetables. The Title is unexceptionable, and all particulars may be learned at the Offices, 74, George-street.

THE BROTHERS; OR THE LAST EMBRACE.

"Lend me your ears and patience, my good sirs, and gentle dames. I will a tale rehearse Of such astounding import, (though each line Fresh stamp'd from truth's own mintage, Commend itself to every sober thinker). As ye, of these vile days of barefaced fiction Shall gaze upon with strong amazement, and cry 'Alas, That tale so passing strange, and full of woe, Should, notwithstanding, be less strange than true.'"

SHAKESPEARE.

FOURTEEN years have passed away in the ceaseless whirl of time, since the impressions a sketch of which I am about to give, were made; but the feelings, never to be forgotten while the heart throbs with life, have frequently since then been resuscitated from the oblivion of buried years, and in all the vigour and impressiveness of actual vision have passed before me.

The sober tints of autumn began to appear, browning here and there various patches on the map of nature, when I found myself returning from a few weeks' tour, without meeting a single incident which appeared either to deserve or demand a folio of memoranda in a traveller's portfolio; no, nor even enough to form a "charming piece" with which to embellish "a lady's album."

The sun had nearly finished his diurnal course, and was throwing a blazing glory of the most gorgeous description, over the western hemisphere, when I entered one of those charmingly picturesque villages in the eastern part of Sussex, for which that lovely country is famous. It might have been, for any thing I know to the contrary, the very place the "sweet bard of Sheffield" has so richly painted, while describing the birth-place of Mary in his "Prose by a Poet," as one of those picturesque and retired situations among mountains and dales, which poetry and romance would instantly fix upon as the uncommensurate abode of peace, innocence, and virtue.

An unusual, and indefinable fascination rested upon it, its beauty was not only seen but felt. The dreamy illusions of poets seemed to be realized. I experienced, or rather fancied I did, the ecstasies they enjoy, without the throes, "so painfully delicious," which they suffer. I almost longed that then the inspiring influence of the "god of song" might descend upon me. The scene, the time, the place, were the poet's own,—but I was not a poet,—nature herself had entered her protest against my being admitted among the tuneful number. I was then, and still am, unable to define distinctly the cause of the feeling produced. I yielded to the determination which I had unconsciously formed, of spending at least one night in this modern Arcadia, to enjoy the luxury of strolling amid its beauties.

It appeared to have but one Inn, employing that term in the same sense as, if I remember right, our great lexicographer Johnson has done—"A house of entertainment for travellers," as its sign significantly informed me I should, on which was legibly inscribed "Good entertainment for man and horse." I accordingly rode up to it, and soon received a fascinating mauvais hôte courtesy from a smiling lass of about eighteen, whose fairy footsteps I followed to the invitation of "This way, sir," into the best parlour, while my weary Rozinante was led, nothing loath, into a warm stable. An excellent cup or two of that beverage which "cheers but not inebriates," served with such despatch as I have seldom found equalled at inns of more external importance, satisfied my present wants, which had well nigh been altogether forgotten by the anxiety I felt to gratify my curiosity. Leaving orders that a supper might be provided for me by half past nine, I sallied forth, like Milton's pair when driven from Paradise, "with the world all before me."

I had not proceeded three steps from the door of my inn, before I encountered a severe opposition to my going forward. An argument arose between my fancy and my judgment—as to the direction I should take; how long this might have lasted, I cannot pretend to say, had not reflection told me, that either way would be equally new, and that therefore to take the one that lay straight before would be as proper as to turn to any other. I accordingly took the opposite direction from that by which I had entered the village, and, after a saunter of about twenty minutes, the humble square tower of a half-dilapidated church became at intervals faintly visible between the "unbragous foliage" of a stately row of elms, by which it was surrounded. A shaded lane on my left, evidently led directly to it, and for a moment I stood half inclined to turn up the bowered vista, and visit the habitations of the dead. The thought, however, occurred, that I might take a more circuitous road advantageously, by continuing the road I had taken, by which plan I should enjoy more of the rich scenery by which I had been so captivated, and take the church in my return. "It shall be even so," I approvingly whispered to myself, and again my animal machine was in motion, propelled by the power of desired gratification.

How long I might have pursued my ramble I cannot determine, so entirely was I entranced at every step, by fresh scenery more rich, more beautiful, more delectable, than the former, bursting upon my view, as I rose by the side of one acclivity, and descended to meet another: had I not, when descending a valley, perceived the dark shadow of the opposite hill, rested more than half way up the one I was descending, reminding me how soon the regent of day would retire within the doors of his golden palace.

As I felt desirous to examine the only public building in the place, the church, excepting indeed the inn, and as I have since learned, the national school, supported by voluntary contributions, I turned in that direction in which my geographical knowledge of the place led me to believe I should find it. I was not, as I too often have been on other and more important subjects, mistaken; a few turnings and windings, and the humble facade stood before me. It appeared a proper hour for such a visit, a period when thought turns necessarily upon one's self, made more powerful by the solemnity of the place.

The moon had already risen, by the light of which I perceived, while looking at my watch, that less than three hours more, and a new day would be given to the world. As I entered the grave-yard, a more than ordinary degree of solemnity pressed upon my mind; while crowds of thoughts seemed each to claim my attention above its fellow thought. A line of venerable elms, placed at equal distances, rose on each side of the building—forming, even in the meridian of day, a cool retreat; being nearly impervious to the scorching rays of the sun. The paler beams of the moon, therefore, although shining with unusual brightness, were barely sufficient to dispel entire darkness. With the curiosity of a stranger, I examined the building, and gazed with a species of superstitious awe upon its ivy-matted tower, and deep lengthy gothic windows. A rustic bench, placed between two of the trees, offered a moment's welcome rest, and I availed myself of it. With a mournful glance, accompanied by an involuntary sigh, I surveyed the house appointed for all living, and gazed with awful interest upon the numerous sepulchral hillocks that lay before me. Some were surrounded by iron palisades, as if to prevent the unfeeling trespassers on the dead from decomposing the spot where the beloved relics of father, mother, husband, wife, or child, quietly reposed; others were merely graced with a stone at the head and foot, rudely inscribed, to inform the passing passenger whose once living form now mouldered in the vault below; or to convey, in some homely, wholesome episode, a "memento mori;" while others, more humble still, were neatly covered with close-cut grass, and bound about with osier or bramble withes.

I had folded my arms mechanically, and given myself up to the unbridled influence of imagination, musing on the spot where "the rude forefathers of the hamlet slept," when my reverie was suddenly broken up by a long hysteric groan, which appeared to proceed from one of the graves. I started suddenly from my fixed posture, and listened with breathless attention, but all was silent,—the same awful stillness reigned; and by degrees, the feverish heat which had rushed through my system subsided to a regular temperature. Scarcely, however, had I regained my composure, before a second and a third expression of grief or agony, from some unknown being, fell upon my ear, and entered my very soul. I felt disposed to move from my seat, but an invisible chain bound me to the spot. The unexpectedness of the sounds had deprived me of the proper exercise of thought; I gazed with strained eyes, and listened with distended ears, but could neither see nor hear any living thing. It required no effort on my part to believe that the tomb-stones nodded at me in mockery, or, moving from their stations, paced to and fro in the pale beams of the now clouded moon.

A nervous sensation crept over me—a cold clammy sweat hung upon my forehead—my hair stiffened—and my very breathing became difficult. A soft, thrilling, indistinct voice, of the wildest harmony, and yet of the most melodious cadence, arose upon the breathless ether: the notes were sadly soothing, and, like Shakespeare's Ferdinand, when surprised by the singing of Ariel, I was ready to exclaim "Where should this music be? 't is th' air, or the earth?" A few broken expressions were all I could gain, except at its termination, which became more full and plaintive, when the words "Tis even so, 'tis even so,"—were distinctly audible.

My head had mechanically turned towards the point whence the sounds appeared to proceed, and scarcely had they closed, before, as if rising from one of the graves, a figure of vestal whiteness glided airily along. Its head was enveloped in a snowy kerchief, barely leaving the face uncovered, presenting a countenance "more in sorrow than in anger;" while a long plain dress covered its slender form, and trailed carelessly upon the ground. As it receded from my view, I rose, scarcely conscious of what I did, and attempted to follow it. I reached the spot where I last saw it—it had vanished. I could discover no trace of its existence; where or how it had gone, I could not conjecture. I stood fear-bound, like a petrified statue.

I did not, or I thought I did not, believe in supernatural appearances. I have again and again laughed at the idle gravity of some lovers of the marvellous but I now was half way, scarcely half, a sceptic; I felt unwilling to believe, and yet I dared not, circumstances as I then was, deny. It might be possible spirits might walk—still I determined to combat the point. I inquired, with the son of Anchises—

"Can it be, that souls sublime Return to visit our terrestrial clime, And that the generous mind, released by death, Can covet lazy limbs, and mortal breath?"

My solicitude was of short duration. An undefinable sensation of fear, doubt, shame, and terror, strangely mingled, possessed me. The beauties of moonlight seemed faded away. An instinctive horror, as with the claws of a harpy, fastened upon me,—and, "Tis even so, 'tis even so," with the unearthly tones in which the words were uttered, rang in my ears. The unknown figure seemed again to pass before me—the illusion became oppressively powerful—with hurried steps, I took the turning which appeared to lead to my inn, and in a few minutes found myself seated in the parlour, from which three hours before I had started in search of adventure.

The Fatal Riot at Canterbury.

BOUGHTEN-UNDER-BLEAN, JUNE 6.—The last act connected with the dreadful proceeding which has caused so much agitation, excitement, and misery in this neighbourhood, took place on Tuesday, in the interior of Courtenay and the unhappy men who met their deaths through his means. On Monday the magistrates and the other authorities of the district held a consultation together, as to the best means to be adopted with regard to the ceremony of the funeral. Dr. Poole, who had been to London, and had an interview with the Secretary of State, informed the magistrates that the government appeared to think that it would be advisable that Courtenay's body should be taken for interment to a distant spot, from the place where the fright had been committed. The magistrates, however, who were aware of the ignorant, superstitious feeling which prevailed in the minds of many persons respecting this impostor, considered that if any secrecy were to be adopted, that a great number of his dupes might use it as a handle for stating his prediction of "rising again" had been verified, and that he had escaped from the hands of "his enemies;" and thus the memory of the man would be preserved, and his wretched end would not serve as an example to his followers. They therefore determined upon making the funeral public, and was really credited, that it was not the body of the real Sir William Courtenay in the coffin. They also directed that the coffin, which had been screwed down, should be re-opened, in order to afford an opportunity to any one who chose to see that Sir William's body was in the coffin. When this became known a good deal of excitement prevailed, and a number of persons proceeded to the Red Lion, about two miles from Boughton, where Courtenay's body had been deposited, in order to obtain a last glimpse of the man, who while living exercised such a control over their destinies. Among the persons who visited him were several families. They all appeared to regard his decomposed remains with the utmost adoration. The coffin in which the remains of the man had been placed was of oak, very plain, and without any plate or inscription on it to denote whose remains it contained. The coffin was six feet two inches in length, and about five and twenty inches in breadth at the widest part. It has been before stated that Courtenay was a man of very muscular proportions, and the weight of the coffin and its contents was enormous—the men employed about it said it weighed more than two ordinary coffins.

We have before said that the magistrates determined to bury the body near the spot, and they decided that it should be interred in Hemel-hill churchyard, about a mile from the Red Lion. All the necessary preparations having been completed, the Rev. Mr. Handley proceeded to the church and to his duty to perform his duties. Shortly before ten o'clock, the coffin was screwed down for the last time, and arrangements were then made to consign it to the earth. At this time there was a great number of persons assembled, some on foot and others on horseback, and in vehicles, outside of the house, anxiously waiting for the appearance of the coffin. There were "bodies of six others of the rioters, Edward Wright, William Ray, Thomas Williams, Stephen Baker, Pines Harvey, and William Bradford, lying in the barn at this time. They had all been provided by their friends with good plain coffins. It was arranged that they should not be interred until after the body of Courtenay had been buried.

The remaining three rioters who were killed in the affray with the military were lying at Boughton, to which place they belonged, and in the church of which parish they were to be interred. The village presented a melancholy appearance, most of the houses were closed, and the inhabitants appeared to be deeply affected at the melancholy scenes that were going on around them.

About two o'clock a large van drove up to the Red Lion. At this time the curiosity of the spectators was at its height. The van was accompanied by a number of special constables, in order to prevent any riotous proceedings arising from the anxiety of the spectators. The coffin was then brought down by eight men, by whom it was carried with apparent difficulty. It was then placed, without a pall or any other covering, in the van. Four of the constables sat inside with the coffin, and three were behind, and on the box with the driver. When the vehicle had received its load, it started off at a quick pace towards the spot prepared for the last resting place of the noble Knight of Malta. It was followed by the pedestrians and equestrians who have been before mentioned as having assembled on the outside of the Red Lion.

It was arranged that the proceedings should be terminated as quickly as possible, and the coffin was, as stated above, at once conveyed to the grave, and the Rev. Mr. Handley commenced reading the burial service. It will be remembered that upon the morning of the fatal affray, while Courtenay and his followers were parading about after the murder of the unfortunate man Mears, Mr. Handley, with another gentleman, were riding near the spot, reconnoitring their movements. The moment Courtenay saw them he drew a pistol from his belt, and deliberately presented the pistol at Mr. Handley and the gentleman who was with him, and pulled the trigger, the ball passed close to them, and the gentlemen, finding the desperate intentions of the ruffian, immediately withdrew, and did not return until the military came up. It was a melancholy, and at the same time a sight getting most painful and extraordinary sensations, to see the worthy clergyman engaged in reading the burial service over him who, but as it were a few short hours before, had so savagely sought his life. All the portion of the service relating to the resurrection of the body after death was purposely omitted, as it was considered that it might perhaps revive recollections and circumstances in the minds of the peasantry in reference to the dead man, which it would be best for all parties should be buried in complete oblivion. Other reasons have been assigned for the omission, but there is no doubt that this is the correct one.

The position of this unequalled Estate in the fertile, rich, populous, and respectable District, in which it is situate, A. The High Road from Sydney via the flourishing town of Berrima, through the Villages of

MARULAN AND BUNGONIA To Lake George, Molonglo, Limestone, and Yass Plains, Maneroo, Port Phillip, South Adelaide &c. &c. passes through it for the length of about one and a quarter mile; and it has upwards of 500 Acres of the richest alluvial Land in the Colony included in it, being what was originally called the Morass. It is contiguous to the Estates of J. Gore J. D. Campbell, J. Holt, D. Macfarlane, T. Baker, and W. Sherwin, Esquires, and is distant from the rapidly flourishing TOWN OF GOULBURN, About fifteen miles; and from Werriwa Township, near Kenny's, at Lake George, about twelve miles—its central situation therefore stands unequalled in the Southern Country, but not only convenient for the purposes of a Homestead for Sheep Shearing and other pursuits requisite in the perfect Establishment of a Grazier and Ploverkeeper, but also as a pleasant residence as it is of itself quite sufficient for the maintenance and support of a large

DAIRY HERD

Where from the peculiarities of its climate and richness of pasture, which approximates not only in appearance, but in quality to the rich marsh meadows in Devonshire, and other favored parts of England. The Eastern position of this Estate is a proverbially excellent Sheep Walk; consequently particularly adapted for the lambing season, and the rear for Cattle and Horses is unimpaired on the northern side, which of course would answer well the purposes of a newly arrived Emigrant with a large Family, possessing of moderate means—as here a perfect domicile might at once be made at a trifling expense—as nature has so bountifully contributed towards those requisites an essentially necessary for the formation of a perfect Agricultural and Pastoral Establishment.

LOT 15. Containing 88 acres 3 roods; bounded on the west by the main road; on the north by 14; on the east by Mr. Moore; on the south by Lot 16. This also contains a fine clear flat, fit for any purposes.

These Farms are so proverbially known to the Inhabitants of Berrima, Bong Bong, &c., that A. P. feels it perfectly unnecessary to attempt to catalogue, suffice it to say, they are equally as eligibly situated in the District in which they are happily placed as Lot 1, combining a greater advantage in one instance, that is, by being nearer Sydney, and only about eight miles from the flourishing

Town of Berrima.

As it has been deemed advisable to dispose of all lands connected with this Estate in each district they are situated at one time, A. P. trusts the public will not consider he is pressing too much valuable property in the Market at one time, although his humble opinion leads him to believe this unrivalled property would have realized a greater sum had the same been differently disposed of, but still this will be the cause of persons who may become purchasers realizing hereafter independencies on the purchases they may be fortunate as to make on the day of Sale, on which epoch, from the peculiar situation of these decidedly and indisputably splendid Estates, such an opportunity A. P. is confidently certain will never again pass through his hands for the public to derive so great a benefit from.

TITLES UNEXCEPTIONABLE. Terms—Ten per cent. deposit at the fall of the hammer; For the residue, approved Bills of 3, 6, 9, and 12 months from the day of Sale, with security on the property if required.
