

End User Licence Agreement

This is important:

You are seeking access to an oral history recording. Oral history is spoken memory. It is personal opinion and is not intended to present the final, verified or complete narrative of events. This transcript is provided to assist in your research and is not to be relied upon as an accurate representation of the audio. It may have been generated using AI speech-to-text technology.

It may contain content that may be confronting, distressing or that reflects author's views, including those of the period in which the item was written or recorded but which may not be considered appropriate today.

The following end user licence agreement is intended to preserve both the rights of the interviewee as well as protecting the reputation of individuals and the National Library. It describes the obligations of anyone who accesses the material in the collection. It is a requirement of use that you comply with these conditions.

END USER LICENCE AGREEMENT

Please read the following terms and conditions carefully and be aware You will have obligations, including the duty to observe the legal and moral rights of the person who provided the oral history, and of the National Library. Permission to use material in the Oral History Collection is conditional on You accepting the terms of the licence set out below.
